President's account of role disputed

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — In accusing H.R. Haldeman of perjury, the Watergate grand jury has indirectly challenged President Nixon's own account of his role in the wiretapping cover-up.

The grand jury also alleged that Nixon's top aides continued the cover-up after March 21, 1972, the date Nixon said he ordered them to conduct a fresh investigation of the wiretapping affair.

And the panel did not bring any perjury indictment against Nixon's chief accuser, John W. Dean III, despite public statements by Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott that Dean lied under oath.

Friday's 50-page indictment made no direct accusation against the President. It charged that Haldeman and six others, including former White House aides John D. Ehrlichman and Charles W. Colson and former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, illegally conspired to obstruct the Justice Department's original investigation of the Watergate break-in and wiretapping.

One count of the indictment said Haldeman lied when he swore that Nixon rejected the idea of raising money to buy silence from Watergate convict E. Howard Hunt and other wiretappers. Nixon has personally endorsed Haldeman's testimony as accurate.

Dean testified to the Senate Watergate committee that when he told the President that Hunt was demanding more money, and that the total payoff could run as high as $1 million, that the President replied it would be "no problem" to raise the money.

Haldeman and Nixon both said Nixon went on to reject the idea as wrong. The grand jury said Haldeman's account is false.

Haldeman, testifying before the Senate panel last July, said he had listened to a tape recording of Nixon and Dean on March 21, 1972.

"The President said, 'There is no problem in raising $1 million, we can do that, but it would be wrong,'" Haldeman said.

At a California news conference three weeks later, Nixon said of Haldeman's testimony, "His statement is accurate."

The President said he told Dean at the March 21 meeting, "John, it is wrong, it won't work."

The grand jury, which has listened to a tape recording of the March 21 meeting, said Haldeman lied when he said the tape showed Nixon said it would be wrong to raise the money.

Although tens of thousands of dollars already had been paid secretly to the wiretappers and their lawyers, the President has said that he was unaware of money demands until Dean filled him in on March 21. He said he immediately ordered a new effort to "get the story out" to the public.

But the grand jury said the cover-up continued even after the March 21 meeting.

It said Haldeman, who attended the last part of the Nixon-Dean meeting, telephoned Mitchell within half an hour afterward. Mitchell had by then resigned as Nixon's campaign director, and had returned to private law practice in New York City.

Mistrial

for Mitchell, Stans eyed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Federal Judge Lee P. Gagliardi abruptly adjourned the Mitchell-Stans conspiracy trial Friday and said he would give "very serious consideration" to calling a mistrial because of "apparent excesses of the prosecution."

Gagliardi adjourned the trial five hours after it began because of a remark in the prosecution's opening statement calling on the jury to "put yourself in the place" of the grand jury that indicted former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans.

The two are charged with using their influence to impede a federal investigation of fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco in exchange for his secret $200,000 cash donation to the 1972 Nixon campaign, and of lying about it to the grand jury.

Late in his two-hour opening statement Friday morning, Assistant U.S. Atty. James W. Rayhill called on the jury of eight men and four women, to "put yourself in the place of the grand jurors who investigated this case, citizens like yourselves."

Stans' attorney, Walter J. Bonner, immediately arose and shouted his motion for a mistrial.

He told the judge that Rayhill's remarks indicated, "contrary to your instructions, that because people just like this petit jury had indicted these two men, that they should draw the natural inference from that fact that these men were guilty. This is an outrageous thing to do in this courtroom, and this case should be dismissed."

Following the lunch break, Judge Gagliardi, in adjourning the trial and ordering the jury locked up until 10 a.m. Monday, said Rayhill had expressed "personal conclusions as though he were a witness in the matter."

The judge said he was "gravely concerned (over) the apparent excesses of the prosecution in its reference to the grand jury and its functions."

Mitchell sat stony-faced through the morning session without knowledge that he had been indicted in Washington on conspiracy and perjury charges in the Watergate affair. Stans was not named in the Washington indictment.

Leaving U.S. District Court at 3:50 p.m. by a side door, Mitchell paused before climbing into his limousine, and said, "I have no comment whatsoever on what happened in Washington."

Gagliardi, who spent days of painstaking questioning and requesting of prospective jurors in order to pick a qualified panel, reinstructed the jury before he sent it back to its midtown Manhattan lodgings.

"He told the jury that an indictment is merely an accusation and that the defendants 'start with a clean slate.'"

"You are the first men and women to hear evidence of guilt or innocence in this case," he said.

In his opening statement, Rayhill also pictured Mitchell and Stans as conspiring "to sell political influence for $200,000 in cash."

"This case is about a briefcase full of $100 bills to buy the political influence of Mitchell and Stans," he said.

"The purpose of this conspiracy was to get $200,000 in cash into the campaign and to keep anyone from learning anything about it."

He said the defendants once had tremendous power but "their prominence in this nation does not entitle them to any special treatment—they once were two of the most powerful men in this country, once two of the most influential advisers to the President."

"The government will prove," he said, "that the means they used to obstruct justice were not crass and crude. Their influence was subtle and sophisticated—over drinks in Mitchell's apartment, in a private club in New York, in a private room in the White House, on a goose hunt in Texas."

If found guilty, Mitchell and Stans could get 50 years in prison each as the first cabinet officers convicted of a crime since the 1922 Teapot Dome scandal. Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior in the Harding administration, was sentenced to one year in jail for accepting a bribe in that case.

Reinecke won't be named, lawyer says

Associated Press

An attorney for Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke in the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. investigation said Friday that he believes indictments in the case will be handed down in two weeks.

Frank Pagliaro of Redwood City, also said recent decisions in perjury cases around the country indicate that any prosecution against Reinecke would be difficult to prove in court. He added that he did not expect Reinecke to be indicted.

Reinecke told the Senate Judiciary Committee that he informed former U.S. Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell of an ITT offer to help finance the 1972 GOP National Convention in a meeting several weeks after a July 31, 1971, settlement that was favorable to ITT.

Regulation

snags lengthen odd-car lines

By NOEL SWANN
Our L.A. Bureau

Confusion over selling gasoline to vehicles used for commercial purposes and the role of station operators in regulating the plan emerged as the main factors Friday in the county's odd-even distribution plan failing to meet its desired goal of shortening waiting lines on the first day.

And it appears that these major snags will not be ironed out for at least a week until the state's Energy Planning Office meets to review provisions of the plan based on the opening day's experience.

State Director of Energy Services Herbert Temple Jr. told a Los Angeles press conference Friday it was apparent that the provisions for commercial vehicles were creating a problem.

HOWEVER, he indicated there would be no immediate change of the rule which says vehicles used for commercial purposes can draw gasoline at any time "in the judgment of the gasoline retailer."

Temple, however, said, "The matter is being reviewed and if it cannot be successfully concluded we will have to have some kind of change."

Asked when it would be reviewed, he said the planning council meets every other week but does have a meeting next week. He said it may be necessary to solve the confusion of commercial use by means of a decal or sticker shown on the windshield.

Temple said it was impossible to evaluate the first day's experience.

HE SAID however, the main problem seemed to be that retail stations were not receiving their allocations from suppliers and many of them were not able to supply gas even to the motorists with odd-numbered plates Friday.

He said he had heard the waiting lines were shorter Friday but generally, reports throughout the county indicated there was little if any change.

Newsmen outlined to Temple many areas in which the plan apparently was falling down as a result of surveys by the media across the county. These included:

—Chaos over the commercial use provision.

—Closure of stations whose allocations had not arrived.

—Refusal of many stations that were open to sell to odd-numbered vehicles more than $3 worth of gas.

—Indications that many service station owners will remain closed Sunday, therefore upsetting the rotation-buying inherent in the plan.

—Because of the $3 limit and the provision of motorists having to show they have less than half a tank, many persons were left with insufficient gas for their weekend needs, yet at the same time could not go to another station for more because the $3 worth of gas had tipped their gauges beyond the halfway mark.

—Statements by numerous service station owners that they had not seen the odd-even regulations promulgated by the governor and that they either did not know how to or did not have to comply until they had seen them.

—Problems of motorists with tank capacities as small as two gallons not being able to get sufficient gas—if they worked far away—to last until the next odd or even day came around.

—The unwillingness of service station owners to ration their monthly allocations so that they would have the same amount of gasoline available each day to make the system fair for both odd and even license plate holders. This unwillingness apparently was brought about because operators find it more efficient and less costly in terms of wages to sell out their supplies in one fell swoop rather than remaining open day after day.

—The inclination of many station operators to remain open at hours convenient to themselves—these hours often duplicating those of many other stations in the surrounding area. Staggered hours for pumping gas is an essential element of the plan.

Many of these problems came to light as a result of the county setting up its Control Center with a special telephone number for persons to call in complaints or ask information.

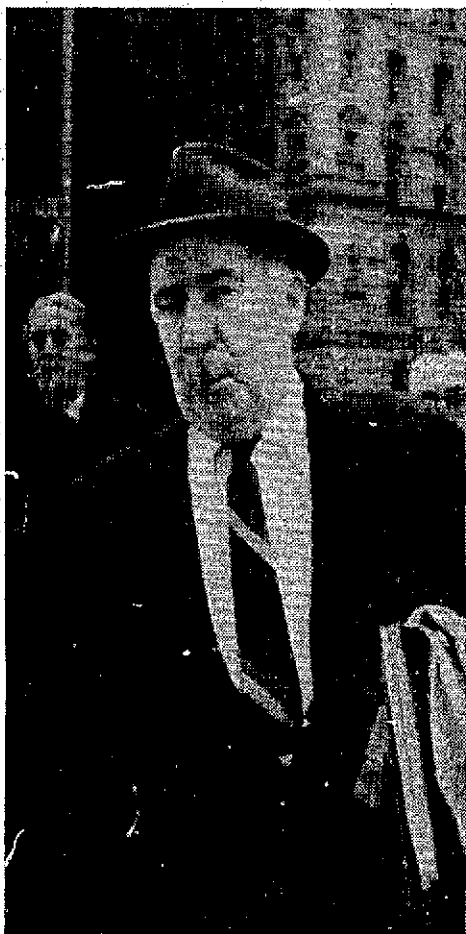

The press conference with Temple was held in the Control Center where a number of employees throughout the day manned 20 trunk lines and answered more than 10,000 calls while telephone officials reported another 50,000 potential callers never were able to get through.

IN FACT, the phone operation affected regular telephone service in the central business district of Los Angeles so badly that Pacific Telephone Co.

To seek Liberal support

Heath refuses to resign

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Edward Heath, rebuffed by the voters in his bid for an overwhelming new five-year mandate, told Queen Elizabeth Friday he would not quit but would try to govern as the head of a minority government.

Government officials said Heath took the defiant stand in a 50-minute meeting with the queen at Buckingham Palace after a day of growing tension and almost continuous huddles with top government ministers, climaxed by a full cabinet session.

Political sources said Heath planned to seek support from the third-ranking Liberal Party to enable him to carry on at the head of a minority government.

Heath called the election to seek a new mandate to take Britain out of what he called her worst industrial crisis since World War II.

But he did not get it, despite unanimous advance predictions by opinion polls that his Conservative Party would win a smashing majority.

Instead, with nearly all results in, he found the country in a deadlocked photo finish, with Harold Wilson's Labor Party ahead by a thin margin in parliamentary seats.

But Labor had no overall parliamentary majority and trailed more than 300,000 popular votes behind Heath's Conservative Party.

It generally had been expected Heath would take the election results as the signal to quit and make way for Wilson to form a Labor administration—although a minority one without any guarantee of support from the Liberals or other smaller parties.

The Labor Party, after a two-hour meeting of its "shadow cabinet," said it was ready to form an administration. Wilson told cheering Labor Party supporters he was ready to move into the prime minister's No. 10 Downing St. office and to face parliament.

But Heath ignored the growing opposition clamor for him to get out.

He spent all afternoon and much of the evening in conferences with top government ministers, then summoned a full cabinet meeting at No. 10 Downing St. to get its endorsement.

Only after that did Heath climb into his car and drive to Buckingham Palace to inform the queen he was not quitting after all, but would attempt to carry on at the head of a minority government.

Government officials said that under Britain's unwritten constitution Heath was not obliged to resign.

They said the only cases in which he would have to do so were if another party emerged from an election with an overall workable parliamentary majority, which the Labor Party did not, or if he were defeated in parliament on a confidence or censure vote.

Political sources said Heath planned now to seek at least an understanding with Liberal Party leader Jeremy Thorpe that it would not combine with the Labor Party to overthrow him for at least a few months while he renewed attempts to find a way out of the crisis of Britain's striking coal miners.

At the end of that time, the sources said, Heath might be prepared to face the voters in a new election.

Dairymen warn milk supply in jeopardy

SAN ANTONIO (UPI)—The nation's largest dairy cooperative Friday said the American milk supply is in jeopardy, and called on Agriculture Secretary Earl Buttz to increase milk price supports to 90 per cent of parity.

The increase, if approved, would amount to $1.64 per hundred weight at present prices.

Every one of the governing standards of law with which the secretary of Agriculture is required to comply dictates price supports for the coming marketing year at 90 per cent of parity," said John Butterbrodt, president of Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) in a letter to Buttz.

Butterbrodt said the administration's policy on import of dairy products is "forcing U.S. dairy farmers out of business so that the U.S. will have to depend on foreign products."

AMPI was one of three big dairy cooperatives involved in the alleged 1971 milk scandal, involving an illegal $100,000 contribution to the Nixon campaign.

Last year Buttz set the level at 75 per cent of parity, the lowest allowed by law, but Congress later raised the minimum to 80 per cent of parity.

Standby pay, price power seen

WASHINGTON — Congress will refuse to make a clean break with price and wage controls and will insist on extending standby control powers, the senator managing the legislation predicts. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., told reporters he believes Congress favors removal of controls from almost all of the economy by May 1. However, he said, Congress wants to preserve President Nixon's discretionary authority to control selected industries, now or in the future. Nixon does not want such power.

Salary suggestion

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Friday that Congress should write a new law governing pay raises for its own members and other high government officials. He said legislation enacted in 1967 under which salary increases can take effect without a vote by either the Senate or the House is "not a good law." Mansfield's comments were made as the Senate, over his protest, put off until Monday the first votes in an election-year tangle over 7.5 pay raises budgeted by President Nixon for Congress members, top executive-branch officials and federal judges.

S. Viet war toll 141 daily

SAIGON — Despite an internationally arranged peace accord, an average of 141 persons a day died in the fighting in South Vietnam during the month of February, official figures released Friday showed. The Saigon command said 2,970 Communists soldiers, 816 government troops and 168 civilians died as a result of combat last month. The previous four weeks of war allegedly caused the deaths of 2,763 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese, 720 South Vietnamese soldiers and 137 civilians, the command figures showed. In Cambodia, meantime, rebel forces launched a series of attacks against government troop positions and garrisons in the marshy, lowland area east of the Mekong River, just northeast of Phnom Penh, field reporters said. A nearby government garrison was called in to reinforce the besieged troops.

Tenuous Gandhi victory

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi won a tenuous, but pivotal, victory in crucial elections Friday in India's largest state, Uttar Pradesh. With 425 seats at stake in the assembly vote, the Congress party had so far won 213 seats, and may win a handful more, representing a majority. Before the elections, when the assembly was dissolved, the congress party had 271 seats.

Death for anarchist

MADRID — Generalissimo Francisco Franco approved the death sentence Friday for a Catalan anarchist, clearing the way for the first political execution in Spain in over a decade. Legal sources said unless the Spanish chief of state interceded at the last minute the execution would take place today, probably by garroting, in which the victim is strangled by an iron collar tightened by a screw.

Combined News Services

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Syrian President Hafez Assad agreed Friday to "keep the process going" in their efforts for a military disengagement between Israel and Syria in the Golan Heights, but Assad rejected the first Israeli proposals.

After a 4-hour, 15-minute meeting in Damascus between Kissinger and Assad, American officials said only, "They have agreed to keep the process going."

Referring to the Israeli proposals the Syrian Arab News Agency said "those were not accepted and President Assad presented Syrian thoughts which Dr. Kissinger will study in preparation for continuing discussions of the subject of the disengagement of forces."

The Golan Heights has been the scene of the bitterest fighting since Kissinger helped arrange a cease-fire between the Arabs and the Israelis in the 1973 October war.

The cease-fire led to talks between Egypt and Israel on a permanent settlement of the crisis, but the Egyptians balked at further discussions in Geneva until the Syrian-Israeli troops withdrawals were accomplished.

Keeping the discussion alive appeared to have accomplished a major objective but there was no indication of how and where the discussions would continue.

Syria's rejection of the first Israeli suggestions could have been expected and was not surprising in itself. The negotiations for disengagement between Israel and Egypt went back and forth for weeks.

Earlier Assad gave Kissinger a list of 65 Israeli war prisoners and promised to let International Red Cross officials visit them.

Caroline Kennedy's New York photo exhibit, scheduled for mid-March, has been cancelled.

Nancy Tuckman, a spokeswoman for Caroline's mother, Mrs. Jacqueline Onassis, said, "Somehow the press was informed and it was blown out of all proportion. A lot of attention was drawn to the occasion. It wasn't what Caroline had planned or wanted. This particular exhibit has been cancelled."

Caroline, a budding photographer, was to exhibit a selection of photos from thousands she's taken over the past three years of friends and family, wild animals, Greeks working on the island of Skopios and other scenes.

Musician

Bobby Timmons, 38, pianist, vibraphonist and composer, died Friday morning in New York, where he had been hospitalized for a month.

He was born Robert Henry Timmons in Philadelphia and started studying music at age 6. He began his career with Kenny Dorham's Jazz Prophets in 1956 and later played with Chet Baker, Sonny Stitt, Maynard Ferguson, Art Blakey, Cannonball Adderly and J.J. Johnson.

From the early 1960s, he led his own trio, often playing in New York and Washington and often playing soul music.

Elizabeth McLeod, a 20-year-old pre-med student, has become the first female student body president on the male-dominated California Institute of Technology at Pasadena.

Miss McLeod won Thursday's election by a landslide of more than two-thirds of the votes.

The school first admitted women undergraduates only 3 1/2 years ago. The undergraduate population now totals 696 men and 98 women.

She says she won because of her platform and because she knows a lot of students and added: "I haven't really had any problems in terms of being stereotyped on the basis of my sex."

"The miracle is that with all those kids involved, not one of them got hurt. Those were some mighty cool children."

That's the way one Milwaukee policeman Friday summed up the youngsters who were held hostage Thursday by gunman Jacob Cohen, 30, an ex-convict wanted for killing two Chicago policemen, as he desperately dickered for his freedom—and lost.

Erin Brady, 13, her brother Patrick, 6, and Patrick's friend Tom Cahill, 8, were in the house when Cohen burst in. Mrs. Brady was at a car wash. Cohen was holding a gun and dragging Daniel Brady, 14, with him.

The White House says President Nixon may go to Nashville, Tenn., home of the Grand Ole Opry, on March 16 to celebrate his wife's 62nd birthday.

White House sources said Friday the President was considering the trip there for the first performance by the famed country-western troupe in its new music hall.

Mrs. Nixon is scheduled to return from a six-day Latin American diplomatic trip on that day and indications were that she and the President would join up in Nashville on the way back to Washington.

Financier C. Arnholt Smith was granted a two-week delay Friday in appearing for a debtor examination but had to make several concessions in return.

Superior Court Judge William Yale in San Diego set a hearing date of March 15 after Smith agreed to a temporary restraining order barring disposition of his assets and any pertinent records. Smith also agreed to appear personally in court.

During the past nine months, Smith has been barraged by numerous complaints and suits including some from the Securities and Exchange Commission and Internal Revenue Service, primarily concerning his dealings with Westgate-California Corp.

Brothel boss

Blonde cabaret singer Janie Jones was convicted Friday in London of running a ring of prostitutes for influential friends.

The trial of the 36-year-old miner's daughter from Tyneside in the north of England ran for 52 days and provided spicy copy for London's popular press. She will be sentenced later.

Miss Jones was accused of using her home in the fashionable Kensington district of London as a brothel equipped with a seven-foot bed and a see-through mirror between bedrooms.

The prosecution claimed Miss Jones ran the house as a free service for VIPs in the radio and recording industries who were in a position to further her career. She paid the girls between $12 and $24 with a bonus if whips were used, the prosecution said.

NBC producer Aaron Ruben reported Friday in Hollywood, Redd Foxx is not expected back on the "Sanford and Son" television show because he is undergoing tests for a nervous condition.

Ruben said Foxx, 51, is hospitalized and the three remaining segments in the season will be shot without him.

A character called Grady, played by Whitman Mayo, is filling Foxx's spot in the show.

Tax trouble

Two weeks of secret pretrial conferences ended Friday in New York in the income-tax evasion case of Dr. W. Kenneth Riland, physician-osteopath who has treated President Nixon and other well-known public figures.

It was learned that Judge Charles E. Stewart Jr. had alerted the U.S. District Court staff to have a panel of jurors ready Monday.

Riland, 62, of Manhattan and formerly of Scarsdale, N.Y., has been accused of omitting more than $71,000 in fees from his joint income tax returns for 1966 through 1970.

Solzhenitsyn

Exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn would be pleased to accept honorary American citizenship if offered, his attorney was quoted as saying Friday.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chief sponsor of a resolution directing President Nixon to grant the honor, said in Washington he talked Friday morning via telephone with Solzhenitsyn's lawyer, Dr. Fritz Heeb of Zurich.

Twenty-four senators have joined Helms in sponsoring the resolution.

Balloonist

The Pentagon ordered a search to resume over a broad area of the mid-Atlantic Friday for missing balloonist Thomas Gatch.

The search will be centered at a position about 1,230 miles south-southwest of the Azores and include an area of some 95,000 square miles "based on a computer run of the most recent information and the most logical assumptions," a Pentagon spokesman said.

Gatch was in the fourth day of his attempt to make the first manned transatlantic balloon crossing when he was last sighted Feb. 21 by a Liberator freighter. He was believed at that time to be drifting toward the Spanish Sahara.

The family of the missing adventurer earlier Friday had criticized the military for failing to resume a full-scale search.

Klansman

"I would do it a dozen times," a self-admitted Ku Klux Klansman said from his deathbed in Ann Arbor, Mich., Friday as he confessed to the fire bombing of 10 Pontiac school buses.

Elmer Tackett, 54, stricken with terminal leukemia, said he set and lit the fuses of the dynamite that destroyed the buses in August 1971, shortly before court-ordered school desegregation busing was to begin in the district.

Tackett was admitted to the University of Michigan Hospital four weeks ago where doctors diagnosed his ailment and estimated he has about two weeks to live.

Urged on by his attorney, the Kentucky-born former coal miner made his statement Friday to newsmen and a court stenographer "to clear my conscience."

Claudia Ruspoli, daughter of Italian Prince Francesco Ruspoli, has been chosen queen of Norfolk Va.'s 20th annual international Azalea Festival.

The festival, scheduled for April 22-27, is a yearly salute to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization with this year's fete marking NATO's 25th anniversary. A representative from a NATO country is selected as queen.

Reinstated

The Maryland Court of Appeals in Annapolis Friday ordered the reinstatement of a Baltimore lawyer disbarred in the 1950s for Communist party activities.

The state's highest court voted 5-2 to readmit Maurice Braverman, 58, to the Maryland bar as soon as he appears in court to take the lawyers' oath "to bear true allegiance to the United States."

Braverman, a self-employed bookkeeper, said Friday he would soon join the legal aid bureau of Baltimore as an intern to refresh his professional skills. He was disbarred in 1955 after serving 30 months in federal prison.

other hand he had a revolver.

"He (Cohen) took me outside when he was ready to go," Daniel said. "He had his arm around my neck and chest, and he had the gun pointed at my neck—kind of near the back of my neck."

"We went outside, and he talked to the FBI man. I was terrified. Then I heard a shot and I jumped to get away."

Danny dived under the car.

Shooting erupted and Cohen was killed—16 bullet wounds in his upper body. The car lurched forward and Daniel was bruised. He left the hospital Friday.

to him, really. I asked if I should get him a towel to wipe his blood. He said, 'Yes.'"

Cohen allegedly killed two policemen in Chicago Wednesday, then eluded a dragnet of hundreds of federal and local officers and managed to flee to Milwaukee. He first holed up in an apartment under a phony name, then took refuge in the Brady home, where he held the children hostage.

While Cohen negotiated with the FBI by telephone for a getaway car, Peter Brady, 9, who had been playing across the street, came home.

"He came staggering up while I was shoveling snow," Daniel said. "He had bloody hands and blood on his chin..."

Erin said, "I was about to walk out the door when this guy grabbed me. He said he would not hurt me."

Patrick and Tom, who had been playing upstairs, heard the noise and came down. Cohen told all the children to sit down.

"He was bleeding all over," Erin said. "He said to get a jacket. I got him a jacket—one of my father's jackets—and helped him put it on. He kept saying he wouldn't hurt me."

City suit on Yorty pressed

United Press International
A City Council committee called Friday for legal action against former Mayor Sam Yorty on a misdemeanor charge punishable by a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

The panel asked the full council to order the city attorney to begin prosecution on grounds that Yorty failed to obey a subpoena for records involving the controversial Occidental Petroleum Co. land swap.

A Superior Court judge refused Thursday to quash the subpoena, and he also refused to grant a delay giving Yorty's attorney time to appeal. Attorney Phil Silver showed up at the council's Governmental Efficiency Committee meeting Friday afternoon, but refused to turn over the personal documents and financial records sought by the panel.

Silver said he questioned the council's right to issue the subpoena "because it violates Fourth Amendment Constitutional guarantees against unreasonable search." He insisted that the former mayor does not have to comply with the subpoena "until all legal remedies are exhausted," and said he will appeal Thursday's Superior Court decision before the State Court of Appeals next Tuesday.

A spokesman in the city attorney's office, however, said Yorty's refusal to turn over records Friday would be a misdemeanor violation if the subpoena is upheld.

2 held in attack on hitchhikers

Two Long Beach men arrested after two girl hitchhikers claimed they were attacked were arraigned in Long Beach Municipal Court Friday on charges of false imprisonment, hit and run and felony morals offenses.

August Raquedan, 23, of 417 E. Hill St., and Sam Ah Sin Alama, 18, of 1403 E. Market St., were bound over by Judge Kenneth Sutherland for Superior Court arraignment March 7 and remanded to sheriff's custody in lieu of $5,000 bail each.

Raquedan was charged with felony hit and run and both defendants charged with false imprisonment and oral copulation.

A third man charged with participating, John Salas, 20, was released without prosecution. A fourth man, Albert "Tuna" Acirbo, 18, Thursday was arraigned before Sutherland on an unrelated burglary charge.

Police said three men picked up two female hitchhikers, 17 and 18, about midnight Tuesday at Broadway and Long Beach Boulevard. The girls told police the men ordered them to take off their clothes and threatened them with a tire iron.

Mail rate up starting today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The postmaster general launched new postal rates Friday with a warning that strong economic pressures could drive rates even higher.

The new rates, effective just after midnight Friday, raise basic rates by 2 cents each to 10 cents for first-class letters, 13 cents for airmail and 8 cents for postcards. Rates also increased — and will increase gradually for the next few years — for parcels and various classes of bulk mail.

Postmaster General E. T. Klassen told a news conference that fuel and wage costs are certain to increase. "If these sorts of things continue to rise, we're going to have financial problems," he said.

THE NEW RATES ARE part of the Postal Service's attempt to become self-supporting, as ordered by Congress in 1970. Current projections anticipate the service reaching the break-even point for the first time in 1975, with a $44 million surplus.

But Klassen estimated that fuel costs alone for this year are running $38 million above estimates. Each penny increase in gasoline costs the Postal Service $3.5 million, Klassen said.

Postal workers are to receive within the next year a second tract raise already anticipated. But the contract also has a cost-of-living escalator clause, and each 1 per cent increase in wages costs the Postal Service $94 million, Klassen said.

The Postal Service could absorb cost increases by cutting back on its massive capital improvements program or cutting service, but Klassen exhibited no sympathy for this approach. He specifically said there is no current consideration of adopting one frequently suggested economy — eliminating Saturday deliveries.

Klassen also called politically motivated the Cost of Living Council decision which has delayed the new rates by two months.

Wheat exports exceed forecast

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Overseas sales of U.S. wheat in the 1973-74 marketing season could run 163 million bushels above official government forecasts, an Agriculture Department summary of reports filed by exporters showed Friday.

Administration spokesmen, however, continued to deny claims by bakers that the record exports could produce a temporary bread shortage for U.S. consumers this spring.

The weekly export data, based on information from private traders through Feb. 17, showed total potential shipments for the year ending June 30 at 1.33 billion bushels, including wheat and wheat products. The Agriculture Department, in contrast, maintains actual shipments will not exceed about 1.2 billion bushels which would still be a record.

The Feb. 17 exporter figures included 852.6 million bushels of wheat actually shipped, plus unfilled orders of about 465.3 million bushels of wheat and 45 million bushels in the form of wheat products.

The unshipped totals include 135.5 million bushels of wheat which exporters list under "unknown destination" contracts. Administration officials contend that much of this "unknown destination" wheat will be resold to American millers instead of going abroad.

Don Paarlberg, the department's chief economist, said, "The wheat in these contracts is still for sale to the highest bidder and it is physically located in the United States. A baker or anyone else who is afraid of running out of wheat can go out today and buy it back (from the exporter) simply by offering the going market price."

Agriculture officials, rejecting appeals by bakers to limit wheat exports, estimate that if overseas sales are held to their 1.2 billion bushel forecast, the United States will end the 1973-74 marketing season June 30 with a reserve of 175 million bushels of wheat. This would be the skinniest stockpile since 1947, but officials insist it would carry U.S. consumers without shortages until an expected record crop is harvested this summer.

If exports actually reach the 1.33-billion-bushel level, however, the reserve on June 30 could drop as low as 13 million bushels. As a second line of defense against shortages in the spring months while consumers await the big summer harvest, the administration has authorized imports of wheat from Canada.

Bethlehem Steel hikes its prices

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP)—Bethlehem Steel Corp. announced on Friday price hikes ranging from 5 to 11 per cent on a wide variety of steel products.

The increases, effective immediately, were mostly on heavy construction steel.

The nation's second largest steel producer said the price hikes originally had been scheduled for Jan. 1 and Feb. 16, but had been delayed by the federal Cost of Living Council.

The council on Thursday gave the nation's steel industry permission to increase prices immediately to cover cost increases through Jan. 31, and to boost prices once a month to reflect the higher costs of scrap iron and other raw materials.

Bethlehem was the first of the Big 10 producers to take advantage of the broadened price limits. Others were expected to follow.

The principal products affected in the Bethlehem announcement were structural and shaped steel, piling, plates, rails, carbon and alloy bars, reinforcing bars, wire, galvanized sheets and tin.

In its ruling Thursday, the council noted that steelmaking costs have jumped $750 million in the past year.

Council director John T. Dunlop said that without price relief the industry would have had to scrap plans for expanding capacity, resulting in a future steel shortage.

Defects cause AMC recall of 16,268 Jeeps

DETROIT (UPI)—American Motors Corp. Friday recalled 16,268 Jeep vehicles because of possible defects in electrical wiring and power brakes.

Included in the recall are 1974-model Jeep Cherokees, Wagoneers and light pickup trucks. AMC said there have been no accidents or injuries reported as a result of either problem.

The power brake units on 14,700 of the vehicles involved will be inspected to insure proper alignment of the metal locking tabs on the booster unit. Improper alignment could result in the loss of the power brake system, but no failures have been reported, an AMC spokesman said.

Hearst handout chief seeks kidnaper contact

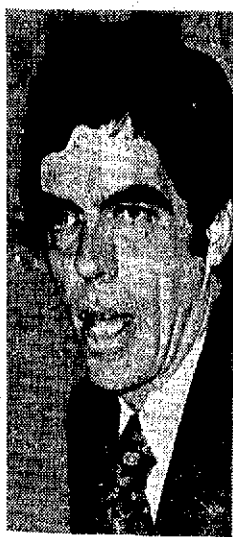

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The boss of the gigantic Hearst grocery giveaway asked the kidnappers of Patricia Hearst Friday to "contact us immediately" if they don't like the way the food handouts are handled.

A. Ludlow Kramer, secretary of state in Washington and administrator of the "People In Need" program set up with a $2 million ransom, made the request after postponing a third distribution of food until next Tuesday.

THE Symbionese Liberation Army, a small terrorist sect which kidnaped 20-year-old Patricia Hearst on Feb. 4, has not been heard from for more than a week.

Publisher Randolph Hearst, Patricia's father, hoped the smooth-running handout of more than $200,000 in groceries on Thursday would bring word from the kidnappers. Kramer told a news conference that the giveaway scheduled for today would be postponed until next Tuesday, when PIN volunteers would try to give bags of food to 30,000 to 35,000 persons.

"We can't meet the SLA demands three times a week," Kramer said. "We can't get the fresh meat, fresh fruit and fresh vegetables that often."

A. LUDLOW KRAMER Appeals to Terrorists —UPI

He said that food would be handed out on Tuesdays and Fridays. The schedule has been Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays — but so far only two distributions have been made in two weeks.

"We believe we have carried out the demands of the SLA and we ask that if they (the giveaways) do not meet the demands, that they (the kidnappers) contact us immediately," Kramer said. Volunteers passed out 25,000 to 30,000 bags of groceries Thursday worth more than $218,500 at supermarket prices. Recipients stood patiently in line on a cold, drizzly day and when the food ran out, hundreds left without a fuss.

Kramer said again that he foresees a "maximum operation of six to 12 weeks" unless donations increase. He said half the $2 million has been spent, although the goods purchased with that money will be coming in for several more weeks.

NO WORD has been received since Feb. 21 from the SLA. That communiqué, containing the last assurance Patricia was still alive, was taped two days earlier. Charles W. Bates, agent in charge of the FBI investigation, met with the Hearst family Thursday night and said the parents seemed to be "holding up very well."

Bates also said during his daily press briefing that the FBI had not decided how long to wait for word from the kidnappers before changing its handling of the case. He has said repeatedly that the agency's first consideration is Patricia's safety and that the 100 FBI men assigned to the case are making no effort to find her.

Motorists find fresh supplies

Gas prices soar everywhere

By DUDLEY LEHEW Associated Press Writer

Many of the nation's motorists found fresh gasoline supplies at service stations Friday but also discovered higher prices posted on the pumps.

Exxon, Gulf, Shell, Texaco, Standard Oil of California, Union, Marathon, Murphy, Getty, Cities Service and others all have announced immediate price changes.

Both Exxon and Shell Oil Co. reduced wholesale prices for gasoline and heating oil. Increases that had been announced earlier, however, wiped out Shell's decrease.

For some gas-hungry drivers, the increases could mean paying over 13 cents more per gallon. The average charge appeared to be about five cents.

The price increases are going to be staggering, said Art Johnson, executive vice president of the Wisconsin Retail Gasoline Dealers Association. "The information I've had so far indicates prices are going to go up 6 to 11 cents per gallon across most of the state, with many increases of between 8 and 11 cents per gallon."

Executive Director Robert Borrett of the Minnesota Association of Petroleum Retailers said Spur stations raised retail prices by 13.7 cents per gallon, making a typical gallon of Spur premium gas cost 62.2 cents. An official of Murphy Oil Co., which produces Spur, said the increase stemmed mainly from reliance on Canadian crude, which now costs more to obtain.

Under existing government controls, once a month gasoline retailers can automatically pass along to consumers any increases in their costs. This is in addition to such beyond-cost increases as the two-cent per-gallon hike that went in effect Friday for independent dealers, who pump about 70 per cent of the nation's gas.

Gulf Oil Corp. said it was raising gasoline prices 1.3 cents per gallon and No. 2 heating and fuel oils by 1.1 cents per gallon. Texaco boosted gasoline four cents and diesel and heating oil by 2.2 cents. Standard Oil of California went up 1 cent as Union went down .5 cents. Marathon officials in Ohio said pump prices would climb 10 cents per gallon and Murphy Oil Co. said in Arkansas that prices to dealers went up 11 cents.

Getty announced Thursday it was hiking wholesale costs by 5.25 cents per gallon. Cities Service Co. said it was raising regular and premium gasoline by less than one cent.

The oil company shifts reflect a penny-a-gallon increase the Federal Energy Office allowed wholesalers effective Friday. The move was designed to maximize the production of gasoline as the country heads into the peak spring-summer demand period.

Meanwhile, more states began to get initial deliveries of their March gasoline allotments and this apparently has trimmed the length of lines of cars at the gas pumps.

An Exxon dealer in Baltimore said after handling the early morning line that had queued up for service that "the pumps are all full" but there are no lines.

Rhode Island became the 14th state to adopt Oregon-style gas rationing, wherein motorists purchase gasoline on alternate days. "It's been going pretty smooth so far," said Paul Catelmo at a Merit Oil station in Pawtucket. "It has cut down the lines somewhat."

Trash-to-oil conversion held impractical for area

By CHARLES SUTTON Staff Writer

The conversion of municipal rubbish into energy or fuel oil looks good on paper and in the laboratory, and may even be feasible in cities such as St. Louis, but it remains a logistical and technological headache for Los Angeles County, a local sanitation expert said Friday.

It's not that the county and its member cities aren't interested in solid waste management, said Frank R. Dair, deputy assistant chief engineer for the County Sanitation Districts. But the fact remains that what is good for St. Louis — or Houston, or even El Cajon — may not be practical in an area the size and nature of Los Angeles County, he said. Especially with its air pollution problems.

Dair made his comments at a one-day conference devoted to the examination of solid waste recovery and conversion programs. The conference was held in Los Angeles' Airport Marina Hotel under the joint sponsorship of the American Iron and Steel Institute, the County Sanitation Department and the Soule Steel Co.

The steel company's Long Beach plant, which makes reinforced steel rods from scrap iron, hosted a visit by the conference's more than 100 delegates during part of the day.

EARLIER, the conference heard the refuse commissioner of St. Louis describe that city's ambitious plan for burning its entire supply of municipal refuse as a supplementary fuel for the generation of electricity, the primary fuel being coal. But Los Angeles County sanitation officials, while impressed with the project, said the St. Louis process may not be readily transferable to this area, which depends on different fuels for power — primarily oil and natural gas. At the moment, said Wayne Sutterfield, St. Louis' refuse chief, about 300 tons of refuse a day, or one-third of the city's entire trash volume, "is burned along with coal to generate electricity by the Union Electric Co., the St. Louis-area utility."

After the steel and other unburnable products are extracted from the refuse, he explained, the remaining matter is shredded and mixed Y with the coal for burning.

Dair and other county officials, however, took pains to note that Southern California's utilities do not burn coal, and are not equipped to deal with ash, a by-product of coal.

"Southern California Edison Co. has some plants that could be converted to coal," said Dair, "but then you get into the problem of air pollution."

Another Los Angeles County sanitation engineer said the current technology "can handle 200 tons of refuse a day, but we have 30,000 tons a day in Los Angeles County."

"I want the answers," he said. "I want them desperately." But he added that no one has come up yet with a trash-to-energy plan that will work on a scale large enough to be economically and technologically feasible in this area.

DESPITE the distressing notes sounded by the county people, the conference nonetheless generated some hopeful statements. The St. Louis project, now in the pilot stage, is expected to be operating on a citywide basis by 1975, with the Union Electric Co. having already committed $70 million to new equipment.

So the conversion of refuse to energy is by no means the economic or technological pipe dream it may have been 10 or 20 years ago. The fact is, said a spokesman for the Iron and Steel Institute, "garbage is becoming a significant natural resource as a result of energy and steel-recovery programs."

Ronald Kinsey said that if the burnable refuse collected each year in the country could be feasibly turned into energy, the result would be equivalent to 290 million barrels of low-sulfur fuel oil, or about five per cent of our domestic oil production. Aside from that, there's the wealth of iron and

N.H. governor discloses Symbionese army threat

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI)—Gov. Meldrim Thomson said Friday he had been threatened by the Symbionese Liberation Army, which has claimed responsibility for the kidnapping of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

Thomson, speaking at a special news conference, said also that a separate group has threatened to kill State Rep. James Splaine, D-Portsmouth.

Other attacks had been made against state Atty.

Gen. Warren Rudman and Billsborough County Atty. James Connor, he said.

Thomson refused to say whether he had been threatened with death but said the mailed threat included "a demand that certain things be done."

Rudman said federal authorities were investigating the case.

"Within the past week I have had a threat from the Symbionese Liberation Army," Thomson said. He said the letter indicated it was from the terrorist group, but would not elaborate as to why authorities believed it was authentic.

When reporters asked whether the letter had been mailed from California, or anywhere outside New Hampshire, Rudman interrupted and shut off questioning.

"In a matter of security, there are a lot of specifics that cannot be mentioned," the attorney general said.

WHILE REFUSING to discuss the nature of the demands, Thomson did say ransom or the release of certain prisoners was not involved.

Woman found dead in apparent kidnap

By MIKE JELF Staff Writer

The body of an elderly Santa Ana woman was found in a field near her apartment home Friday afternoon, just two hours after a note from persons claiming to have kidnaped the woman was discovered, authorities reported.

The note, they added, demanded $50,000 for the elderly woman's safe release—but the note was addressed to no one.

The woman, whose body was found in a field 100 yards from her apartment at 2 p.m., was identified as 79-year-old Marian Morgan, of 1060 W. 17th St., Santa Ana police reported.

Police were called into the case shortly after noon by FBI agents who said they had been informed of the discovery of the ransom note, stuffed in the top of a pipe which shielded a corner of the woman's apartment building from passing autos.

Agents said the note was discovered by the manager of the apartment complex, identified as Louis S. Wiechecki, who had called the FBI about noon. Both the FBI and Santa Ana police were at the scene when an officer discovered the body.

Cause of death was not immediately determined.

Demos' new rules aim at wide-open convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic National Committee gave its overwhelming approval Friday to rules expected to have a significant impact on the fight for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination.

A threatened delaying move by the party's state chairmen fizzled out and the rules were adopted without major challenge to the key provision requiring proportional representation throughout the 1976 delegate selection process.

THIS MEANS that delegates will be awarded strictly according to the strength of the different candidates, ending the old system under which one candidate could get most of a state's delegates by getting more votes than his rivals. The new system will probably lead to a wide-open presidential nominating convention.

The final approval came on a voice vote that ratified without change Thursday's action by the DNC executive committee.

The proportional representation provision is expected by party leaders to benefit candidates such as Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, who in 1972 demonstrated some strength in all parts of the country, and make other candidates work harder in more states to win delegates.

CANDIDATES with at least 15 per cent of the vote would qualify for delegates. A move to raise that to 20 per cent was easily defeated.

The state plans will be reviewed by a 25-member

Eisenhower addresses GOP youth

WASHINGTON (AP)—David Eisenhower told some 500 Young Republicans at a White House reception Friday that it was up to them to help formulate principles of leadership and government for their party and country.

He continued the greeting for the youthful party leaders that President Nixon had launched with a speech to the group's convention session Thursday.

Nixon had urged them to "keep your faith, keep your confidence" and not be disillusioned by administration mistakes or special-election defeats.

Eisenhower noted that Nixon had speculated that some of the young GOP members might possibly by the year 2000 move into the White House as occupants.

"Let's end the suspense," said the President's son-in-law, "and have a lottery right over here," indicating the East Room where he spoke.

It drew a big laugh and applause from the audience, which greeted Eisenhower with enthusiasm.

Court plays lawyer's advertising

Belli suspended for 30 days

By BERNARD HURWITZ

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Flamboyant trial lawyer Melvin M. Belli, who endorsed Scotch whisky and publicized his lectures, was suspended Friday from practicing law for 30 days for unprofessional conduct.

The California Supreme Court ruled in a 6-1 decision that Belli violated state professional canons by allowing his picture and endorsement in a Scotch whisky advertisement.

The court also said it was improper for Belli to permit his lecture agent to send a letter to news media describing him as a "brilliant attorney."

State rules of professional conduct for lawyers prohibit them from soliciting professional employment by "advertisement or otherwise." The court upheld Belli's First Amendment right to lecture and distribute brochures.

BELLI, contacted at the La Costa resort in northern San Diego County, said he was "very impressed with the court for giving First Amendment rights to lawyers so they speak their opinions in the market place."

"Where I may have been errant was in the action of a lecture agent whom I hired endorsing in my name a whisky that I knew nothing about."

The court rejected the recommendation of the disciplinary board of the California Bar that the snow-haired controversial lawyer be suspended for one year.

Belli's clients have included Jack Ruby, charged with shooting Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy. He recently undertook the case of two black girls in Montgomery, Ala., who claim they were sterilized without proper consent.

Dissenting Justice William Clark Jr. declared: "Mr. Belli's flamboyant life-style has no doubt offended many a lawyer and judge. But while the facts before us may affront our sense of professional dignity, they fail to support suspension of petitioner from the practice of law for willfully soliciting professional employment."

BELLI was admitted to the bar in 1933 and in addition to a lucrative law practice has lectured extensively on the law and related topics for more than 30 years.

In 1966, the court said, Belli hired Richard Fulton, who runs a lecture bureau, as his agent and manager in the lecture business. Fulton was authorized to secure lecture dates and arrange publicity, including radio-television appearances, advertisements and flyers.

Fulton distributed pamphlets on his lecturers including Belli, who was given a one paragraph description saying he was "world famed" and served as attorney for Ruby.

The agent also arranged for three ads which appeared in the New York Times and New York magazine with Belli's whisky endorsement. Belli himself had posters and flyers displayed describing his "Belli lectures."

THE COURT reviewed grounds upon which the state bar decided Belli had violated legal ethics, but decided that only two were proper bases for discipline.

It said that because these involved acts by Fulton in which Belli did not actively participate, a one-year's suspension was excessive and 30 days was appropriate.

The court found Belli was not responsible for two of the ads which said "Melvin Belli is onto unbridled Scotch," carried his picture and a description of him as a famous trial lawyer.

But the 33-page decision said he had returned to this country from Africa before the third appearance of the ad and had taken no action to stop it, allowing the agent to reasonably infer he had authority to do so.

"Of course, I have great respect for the state Supreme Court but not for the state bar. They've been after me for 40 years, the establishment, I mean," Belli said.

"I've been for minority groups and underdogs, and that's one of the reasons. But, contrary to what the bar wanted, the court gave me only a month's suspension, and I'll have to take the month's suspension directly."

THE COURT ruled the ad promoted liquor sales, thus was not an activity protected by the First Amendment and there was a substantial certainty it would generate law business for Belli.

The justices concluded that the letters to national newspapers and magazines and the New York Times announcing the 20th anniversary of Belli's lecture series had language directed primarily at expanding his law practice and violated the rules.

"An attorney cannot advertise he has performed his services so well that his clients subsequently praise him," said the court in saying the letters solicited professional employment.

The court said brochures and lectures were covered by First and Fourteenth Amendment protections and there was no showing he had solicited business in his radio-television appearances. The distribution of flyers and publicity also was protected.

GAS LINES

was forced to change the telephone number.

Starting today the Center will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. and callers will now use this number: 520-8100.

Officials at the center said of the calls complaining about the plan (as opposed to those inquiring about it) 80 per cent were on the question of providing gasoline to vehicles used for commercial purposes.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn sat in on the press conference with Temple and both men attempted to answer certain questions.

But while answers appeared to be in sight for some of the complaints, it was clearly apparent that many of the other bugbears probably would not be dealt with because of a built-in desire of state officials not to impose forced regulations on the station owners.

HAHN SAID he instructed county officials late Friday to mail to every service station owner in the county a full set of the odd-even regulations promulgated by Reagan. He said that should dispel many of the problems arising from operators saying they could not deal with situations until they had read the regulations.

County operators at the Control Center began advising callers they should produce some proof to service station owners that their vehicles were used for commercial purposes. In some cases they were told to get letters from their employers and in others it was suggested they produce copies of their 1940 Federal Income Tax forms to show they were able to deduct as a legitimate expense use of their cars for business purposes.

ON THIS angle the decal or sticker solution could be applied by the state Energy Planning Office in upcoming weeks and Temple suggested there may be some review of federal requirements involved dealing with a definition of commercial use as a vehicle driven 70 per cent on business.

Additionally on the commercial angle, Hahn said he had asked the Department of Motor Vehicles to work on the possibility of producing a computer printout showing which are properly registered commercial use vehicles.

This way, he suggested, drivers could be given some form of identification to end the confusion over supply of commercial vehicles.

However an unforced twist of irony developed in the commercial situation because state law this year demanded that all small pickups and campers get commercial plates. Because of this many young people with small pickups and others with trailers were demanding gas on off-numbered days, showing their commercial plates as "proof" of commercial use.

SHOULD THE concept of stickers or license identifications for those using their cars for business be put in, this apparently would solve the problem of those recreational-type vehicles with commercial plates trying to draw gas at will.

However there seemed to be no answer forthcoming for those problems stemming from the dealers being given judgment roles and the other snags relating to pumping hours, rationing of allocations to insure daily supplies, remaining open on weekends and setting their own price limits.

Temple said he met Friday with four separate dealer associations in the Los Angeles area and "urged them" to comply voluntarily with the provisions.

HOWEVER if dealers will not agree, the state apparently will not use its powers to force compliance.

Temple rejected news-men's contentions that the plan apparently was emerging as one that was mandatory for motorists but voluntary for service station operators. And Hahn defended the voluntary nature of the provisions applying to operators, saying, "We don't want to take away the dealers' rights to operate. Each should regulate his own business. We can't order operators to keep open if they don't want to, or to stagger their hours if they don't want to."

Enforcement of the odd-even program also apparently will have little effect on insuring that operators take the steps they have to make the plan work, such as staggering hours and opening Sundays.

SHERIFF Peter Pitchess told a news conference he has ordered his department to police the program on a "complaint" basis.

"We don't intend to have surveillances of service stations to see whether they are conforming," Pitchess said. "We are not about to peer into windows to see if tanks are half-empty or not."

The Sheriff said his forces naturally would see to proper traffic control at waiting lines, blocking of driveways and handling altercations that may develop at the pumps.

He said the plan was "enforceable," but to what degree became a question of how much money should be spent.

He said officers are under orders to issue citations where violations occur rather than make arrests.

HE INDICATED his men also would not be making a point of trying to catch persons with the wrong license plate numbers seeking gas on off-limit days.

"To a great extent the plan will be one of voluntary compliance and I don't envisage a great degree of police action to enforce it," said Pitchess.

A policy statement issued to his department said officers should "attempt to resolve all suspected violations through voluntary compliance and explanation of the regulations. Patrol personnel during the initial stages are not responsible for inspection of retail outlets or their customers to determine whether they are complying. Enforcement participation shall be limited to called-for services."

When voluntary compliance cannot be resolved officers in the field are authorized to issue citations where the violator is present and to simply complete complaint forms where violators may have left the scene.

IN CONTRAST to his earlier statements, the printed instructions to department personnel say, "Field observations" will be made when these services are requested by station operators and/or customers.

In situations where observing deputies see violations they will issue citations. If the violation occurs out of the presence of the deputy and a citizen's arrest is requested, the deputy will follow normal citizen's arrest procedures "except the violator will be released from custody at the scene through the use of a citation."

Throughout the day operators at the county Control Center and other county officials received, in addition to the regular complaints, some of an unusual nature.

AMONG these was one involving a doctor with an even plate trying to get gas on his way to an emergency heart failure patient. The service station operator was reluctant to fill the car and a phone call was put through to a county official. Until the county official assured the operator he would not be fined $500 for giving the doctor gas, the operator would not budge.

A few calls came in from professional gardeners who found that many stations were refusing to provide them with enough

PRIME MINISTER EDWARD HEATH leaves No. 10 Downing Street to see Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace, where he told her he does not plan to resign but will try to carry on as head of a minority government.

British vote was rebuke to both major parties

By ALVIN SHUSTER

LONDON — The crowds gathered quietly outside 10 Downing Street all day Friday in scenes reminiscent of World War II. The country, crippled by economic disruption, was faced with political crisis.

The voters in the general election Thursday had clearly decided to deliver a rebuke to both the Conservative Party and the Labor Party, depriving each of an over-all majority in the House of Commons. It was a rare indecisive outcome here, the first of its kind in 45 years.

Britain enters a period of grave uncertainty, with a minority government that will find itself without the mandate to take the tough decisions the country needs. It will undoubtedly be a time of challenge to the British parliamentary system, the politicians and the parties.

The new 635-seat House of Commons is composed of a generation of men totally unfamiliar with the workings of minority rule. Prime Minister Edward Heath and Harold Wilson were both only 12 years old the last time Britain faced a similar parliamentary balance.

IT IS just not supposed to work that way. The British electoral system, much to the unhappiness of the Liberal Party now holding the balance, is stacked against small parties, to try to insure that governing politicians do not have to look over their shoulders at others before deciding how to deal with the nation's needs.

But this time the voters clearly could not make up their minds between the two giants, gave them virtually the same number of votes, shifted to the Liberals and other smaller parties, and then found themselves wondering where they were going now. The last 24 hours have been the most suspenseful in modern British political history.

Whether the system and the politicians are up to the present challenge is a crucial question. Will they be able to work together to settle the coal miners' gas to fill their 1.5-gallon capacity lawn mowers.

Another report dealt with alleged price gouging. Apparently a motorist who had been waiting in a long line became irate when he saw the price being charged at the pump, and threatened to call the Internal Revenue Service. In disgust, the station operator merely ordered his staff to lock up all the pumps, leaving the vast line of motorists behind the protester to drive off in frustration.

strike, to solve the financial emergency and move to curb soaring inflation? Or will they resort to the "slanging matches" the public has now suggested it no longer wants to tolerate.

For there was no win-

ANALYSIS

N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

ner in this election. Most experts agreed that the message to the politicians was to begin "pulling together" from the center and avoid the divisiveness inspired by the extremes.

THE VOTERS said no to Heath's bid for a "strong government." They also said no to the often radical proposals by Wilson, the Labor Party leader and a former prime minister himself.

The British generally, and that includes many politicians, are known for their common sense. Whether that quality will now emerge prominently in political life to meet the threat of economic chaos is another question.

Given the plight of Britain, with most of her industry ordered onto a three-day week because of the coal strike, any government will have its hands full. And now a minority party will have to govern, walking through treacherous political terrain, hoping that it can pick up a vote here and a vote there from Liberals, Scottish or Welsh nationalists or the group coming over from Northern Ireland.

Each of the smaller parties has its own interests, and the price demanded for support could well be too high for the politicians in charge. To make it all work in such dire straits, members of the major parties agree, would require immense goodwill not only from the smaller groupings but also from members of the major parties as well.

It was considered possible that the framework would soon collapse and that the British would have to go to the polls to decide again. It is not a prospect that weary politicians returning to London would relish. Nor would the voters jump with glee.

MOREOVER, the Conservative and Labor members of Parliament will need time to recover from the nonvictory. Neither party is united in the best of times, and the election postmortems could lead to internal stresses.

Some of the Conservative leaders, for example, were already discussing the future of Heath, who made the decision to go to the country rather than wait until the miners were back at work and industry was back to normal. Whether inspired or not, the speculation suggested that his successor could well be William Whitelaw, who worked out the constitutional settlement in Northern Ireland and is now secretary for employment.

"Me. Heath went to the country on the issue of who governs," a television commentator remarked, "and the answer he got was nobody."

NIXON CHALLENGED

The indictment said Mitchell later the same afternoon authorized payment of $75,000 to Hunt. Hunt was demanding $120,000 in return for keeping silent about his activities as a member of the White House "plumbers" unit, including the 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, it said.

The $75,000 was delivered to Hunt's lawyer, William Bittman, the evening of March 21, the indictment said. It said the next day Mitchell told Hunt's old boss, Ehrlichman, that Hunt "was not a 'problem' any longer."

LATER, the indictment said, Ehrlichman told his aide Egil Krogh, who had been boss of the plumbers unit, that he didn't think Hunt "would reveal certain matters."

Krogh has pleaded guilty to a federal charge in the Ellsberg case and is serving a six-month jail term. Ehrlichman has pleaded innocent to a California indictment and has refused a request by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski to plead guilty.

The 13-count indictment, detailing alleged instances of destruction of evidence, $557,500 in cash payments to the seven original Watergate defendants and offers of executive clemency, also named:

— Robert C. Mardian, former assistant attorney general and Nixon campaign deputy.

— Gordon C. Strachan, a former Haldeman aide and White House liaison to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President.

— Kenneth Wells Parkinson, a lawyer for the Nixon campaign committee.

In addition to the conspiracy charge, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine, the grand jury also charged all the defendants except Mardian with obstruction of justice by thwarting government investigations of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic national headquarters.

Further, Mitchell, whose trial on separate federal charges began Friday in New York City, was charged on four counts of perjury or making false statements to Watergate investigators.

Also, Haldeman and Ehrlichman, the President's former chief domestic adviser, were charged on three counts each of perjury and making false statements. Strachan was indicted on one count of lying to the grand jury.

Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, who received the 50-page indictment late Friday morning, set arraignment for March 9. No trial date was set.

The indictment, capping a 20-month investigation, was delivered to Sirica by Jaworski during a 10-minute ceremony in Sirica's courtroom. Jaworski predicted a "long and protracted" trial lasting three or four months.

Besides the indictment, Sirica received two locked briefcases, one each from assistant prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste and grand jury foreman Vladimir N. Pregelj, a Library of Congress employee who also gave Sirica a sealed Manila envelope containing an unspecified "report" from the grand jury.

The report, which Sirica opened, read briefly and ordered sealed, was believed to contain the grand jury's assessment of the President's role—if any—in the Watergate affair.

Sirica ordered everyone concerned with the case to keep silent outside the courtroom. He told the 21 grand jurors — 13 men and eight women empaneled on June 5, 1972, shortly before the break-in — they could expect to be summoned again in about two weeks.

Friday's indictment dealt only with the cover-up of the June 17 Watergate break-in. Jaworski was expected to announce further indictments involving other administration figures in connection with the White House "plumbers" investigative unit and its attempted burglary of the Los Angeles office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist in 1971.

The grand jury also is known to be investigating the administration's ties with the milk industry and the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT), as well as assorted campaign financing irregularities.

In its indictment Friday, the grand jury listed 45 "overt acts" of conspiracy by the seven defendants, including:

— Using "deceit, craft, trickery and dishonest means" to block investigations by the FBI, the Justice Department and the CIA regarding the Watergate break-in.

— A charge that they "removed, altered, concealed and destroyed documents, papers, records and objects" related to the investigation.

— Paying $557,500 in "cash funds" to the original Watergate defendants who were tried in January, 1973, and subsequently sentenced.

— Making offers of executive clemency to three of the original defendants, G. Gordon Liddy, Hunt and James W. McCord Jr., and later to Jeb Stuart Magruder, the President's deputy campaign manager.

There also was an allegation that Mitchell personally authorized a promise of executive clemency to McCord in January, 1973.

FBI does not like streaking

By DONALD P. MYERS
United Press International

The FBI Friday came out against streaking.

So did college officials and police and sheriff's officers.

But the guys and gals on the nation's campuses are all for the newest collegiate craze. They're running around in the raw, usually wearing only socks and a smile.

"We don't consider it any more serious than swallowing goldfish or participating in a panty raid — as our parents once did," said a single streaker at Texas Tech. "It's a fad. We are not trying to arouse any sexual desire, not even offend anyone. It's just fun."

BUT LAW officers frowned at all the flesh.

"If a student has such an act on his record — while it might have all been done in fun — it could possibly affect his future forever," said an FBI agent in Lubbock, home of Texas Tech where one streaker was jailed Friday. "A streaker could never be hired by an outfit like ours."

The Lubbock arrest caused a rowdy group of about 250 streak fans to attack the campus police station. They threw bottles and bricks at windows before they were dispersed.

Streakers dashed au naturel across campuses and through women's dorms in Texas, California, Florida, Maine, Tennessee, North Carolina and other states.

A STUDENT wearing shoes, socks and nothing else got streaking off to a running start on the University of Tennessee campus in Knoxville. He leaped from a green Volkswagen, sprinted across the athletic field and faded like a picked swan around the corner of the music building. Later, about 25 Tennessee men won the cheers of their fellow students for nude night gallops.

One coed, wearing a scarf to ward off goosebumps in the 40-degree weather, was grabbed by a policeman on the University of North Carolina campus in Greensboro. Angry males came to her rescue, surrounding the police car and chanting, "Let her go. Let her go." Police did.

Streakers also struck at the University of South Florida, Rice, Baylor, North Carolina State, Pembroke State College, Southwest Texas State University, Texas, Texas A&M, University of Maine and Stanford.

AND THE fad spread to some high schools in Texas, where streakers were reported at Alvin and Angleton. "It beats sitting in the Dairy Queen," said a high school coed.

Streaking ruled out at Harbor

A policing policy for the harbor area on the subject of streaking was announced carefully Friday by Capt. Gary Cooper, commanding officer of Los Angeles Police Department's Harbor Investigative Division.

"It can't happen here," Capt. Cooper said. "This is our policy on streaking."

The Harbor Division keeps a watchful eye on the campus of Los Angeles Harbor College, a mile north of the divisional headquarters in San Pedro.

Streaking made the news this week in campus frolics in Connecticut, Texas and North Carolina. It is a phenomenon in which students dash nude in public, and even coeds were getting into the action.

Capt. Cooper said that his department long has had a basic policy of making arrests for indecent exposure.

Ration?

I am having problems getting sufficient gasoline and diesel fuel for my diving business. We operate on an emergency basis most of the time and use a lot of fuel to run our underwater equipment such as compressors and welders. Is there a government department that grants fuel allocations for small business people? A.B., Long Beach.

At this time there is no way that you can fit into the rationing system set up for large fuel purchasers but if rationing for everyone comes, you may be able to get extra coupons, according to Theodore Owings, spokesman for the Federal Energy Administration in San Francisco. Wholesale or large purchasers are now restricted to 100 per cent of the amount of fuel they bought in 1972, an amount often below their current needs. Their local suppliers serve as rationing agents by limiting them to their 1972 purchase figures. If the buyer feels the supplier isn't reasonable, he can ask the Federal Energy Administration to examine his fuel needs to see if his allocation should be increased. A wholesale purchaser is anyone who buys at least 84,000 gallons a year or a farmer who buys 20,000.

Patent

Can you patent clothing designs? If so, how is it done and how much does it cost? R. S., Long Beach.

Yes, you can under what is called a "design patent." The simplest way to secure such a patent is to contact a patent attorney who will first order a "novelty search" of patent office records in Washington, D.C. to see if someone has already patented the design. If no one has then the attorney will file a patent application for you. This will cost about $300 and includes drawing fees, attorney and patent office fees. Once the design is filed the patent office will conduct its own independent novelty search. If the patent office decides that your design has not already been patented then they will grant the patent. The final fee for the patent is $11. Patent attorneys can be found in the yellow pages.

Bad battery

My husband bought an Ortho car battery in June which was guaranteed for 50 months. It went out in October and he returned it to the service station where he bought it but the station had been sold and the new owners didn't carry that brand. He had to buy a new battery immediately and couldn't shop around for another Ortho dealer. He decided to just write it off as bad luck but I don't want to give up without trying to get a refund I feel he is entitled to. Can you help? Mrs. J. C. R., Downey.

Action Line

No. The warranty provided only for a trade-in on a new battery at a reduced price based on the age of the old battery and not a refund, said Jerry Shaw of the Battery Distributing Co. in Santa Ana. She said if your husband had called them when the battery went out they would have referred him to a dealer in your area who would honor the warranty.

REACTION

You recently said that U.S. Treasury bills may be purchased from any national bank. They are available from state-chartered banks, as well. K.M., Long Beach.

BankAmericard faces huge class action suit

Santa Ana Attorney Robert L. Sassone sued Bank of America and BankAmericard for $100 million in Orange County Friday, charging BofA's special relationships with certain retailers constituted a fraud on the public.

Sassone's petition was a class action suit brought on behalf of himself and readers of eight regional newspapers who have made purchases from the publications' ads. He said his action was similar to that brought by the Consumers Union in Washington, D.C., recently against Bank of America. Sassone's suit said customers paid more for their purchases than they would have had not BofA "been receiving rebates."

Burglars ransack home of bike, TV

A bicycle, television, clock and leather coat, valued together at $410, were stolen from the home of Benny Cox, 1740 Redondo Ave., by burglars who entered through a bathroom window, Long Beach police said Friday.

Solicitors stalking residents

A warning was issued Friday by harbor area police for householders to be wary of a gang of "foot-in-the-door" solicitors using intimidating and abnoxious tactics.

"As many as 100 of these solicitors have been brought into this area in the past few days," Lt. Mitchell Maricich said. "They are persistent and they use fear tactics to induce frightened persons to pay on the spot for big orders of books, Bibles and magazines—all to be delivered later."

"The fees run to $70 or more. If checks are written, the solicitors take them at once to a bank and cash them, to prevent the writers from stopping payment."

"These solicitors carry what seems to be legal identification. The fees they ask are excessive for the merchandise promised."

"The defense against one of these foot-in-the-door solicitors is, first, don't let him enter your home; second, if he walks in, order him out; third, don't buy any publication you didn't intend to buy; and fourth—most important—if he doesn't immediately leave, go call the police."

D.A. battling .333 on gun counts

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

The district attorney's office Friday battled .333 when of three men charged with robbery and possession of contraband firearms, one was bound over for Long Beach Superior Court arraignment, the second released without prosecution and the third jumped bail.

Quintin Payne, 18, of San Diego, a crane rigger, was held to answer March 15 in Long Beach Superior Court on two counts of armed robbery. Judge Kenneth Sutherland remanded Payne to sheriff's custody in lieu of $10,000 bail.

Leonard Charles Dailey, 25, of 1208 Daisy Ave., a cook, was released late Friday by Long Beach police after the prosecution said a material witness failed to appear at the defendants' preliminary hearing.

Sutherland denied a motion by Dep. Dist. Atty. Albert MacKenzie that Dailey be held while the witness was found. MacKenzie later said he will refile robbery charges against the defendant.

Sutherland earlier issued a no-bail bench warrant for the arrest of Theoretic Givens, 22, also of the Daisy Avenue address when Givens failed to appear for the preliminary hearing. Sutherland said that a $10,000 bond Givens posted was immediately forfeited.

Investigators said Givens and Payne were arrested Feb. 8 at the Daisy Avenue address after a man told police three men robbed him of $90. Police said a search of the defendants' apartment revealed several money-filled cash register drawers and eight firearms including a Thompson submachine gun and a sawed-off shotgun.

Plea slated in forgery case

Grady Jennings, 41, indicted in Orange County on a charge of conspiring to sell $1 million in counterfeit travelers' checks, is to enter a plea March 15 in Santa Ana Superior Court.

The date was set when Jennings made a court appearance Friday. Jennings, 41, of Hollywood, and Romeo Taylor, 24, of Los Angeles, were arrested after an undercover investigation by the Orange County Sheriff's Office.

Taylor has previously pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of forged documents and is awaiting sentencing.

GARDENING

Cacti and succulents care easy

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Cacti and succulents are minimum care plants that one can grow in containers or in the garden. The shapes of the plants as well as color tones can be arranged attractively.

The gardener should visit the Huntington Botanic Gardens at 1151 Oxford Street, San Marino, and observe the plants and their landscape effects. Another educational cacti-succulents gardens is the Desert Gardens Nursery of Jessie Halverston at 21588 Highway 60, six miles east of Riverside, exit Lawless Road or Day Street. The gardens contain individual plants in artistic landscaping. The plants might not all be blooming, yet the gardener becomes conscious of contrasting color. He knows that even without blooms the whole planting is a mass of interesting colors. There are collector plants, specimens large and small, plants for shade, others for sun, grafted cactus, yuccas, small plants for windows, hanging and baskets. One of the unusual succulents we saw there was a hanging basket plant that deceived us from a distance. It looked exactly like an ivy.

Local nurseries usually have collections of succulents and cacti with plant name-labels in the small pots, ready to replant to larger pots or into the ground. Normal garden soil is sufficient for the plants. Cacti won't tolerate as much moisture as will the succulents.

Gardener must work to control the weeds that grow in these areas, because the plants won't tolerate herbicides. The weeds must be hand rooted out. About the only insecticide spray some gardeners find safe to use is malathion.

Ivy ground covers are hardy, unlike the succulent ground covers. A systemic resembling herbicide to control blade grass type weeds in ivy ground covers also attacks the bermuda grass growing in it.

Thickly matted ivy ground covers, trailing lantana, star jasmine, ivy leaf geraniums, osteospermum after they're through blooming, trailing vinca, prostrate rosemary, and others, should be cut back to within six inches of the ground. Overgrown prostrate rosemary may need to be cut back with pruning shears, whereas the rest of these ground covers can be cut back with power driven hedge shears.

Alioto admits campaign ills, denies he's quitting

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Mayor Joseph L. Alioto acknowledged Friday some "internal disagreements" in his campaign organization but said rumors of his withdrawal from the Democratic gubernatorial race are "just a lot of nonsense."

In Long Beach for a speech before about 200 persons at the Democratic Women's Study Club in the Lafayette Hotel, Alioto said the rumors "were unquestionably fostered by all of my opponents."

Elements of the rumor listed the causes for the San Francisco mayor's departure as including his wife's dramatic 17-day disappearance to underscore her feelings of having been neglected, a snag in his official filing procedure and internal argument over who is in charge of the campaign, an argument involving Alioto's state chairman, former Dep. Atty. Gen. Charles O'Brien and San Francisco campaign consultant Sanford Weiner.

Filing ceremonies were derailed when the San Francisco clerk informed Alioto he had just received notice that a financial statement had to be published simultaneously with the filing if you were a nonincumbent, but that you have until March 11 otherwise," Alioto said.

"So the filing was not withdrawn because we never made it. What we did do was go down and have a ceremonial statement and paid the money. We paid our filing fee; now the financial statement is being completed and will be filed by Monday or Tuesday."

Did O'Brien leave the campaign?

"He has not departed from the campaign. Charles O'Brien is still general chairman and will continue to be spokesman for the Alioto campaign and we're very, very happy about that," the Mayor said.

Has there been a breach with Weiner?

"No, there isn't any breach there but the rumors you've heard have some substance to them in that a disagreement developed internally as to who was in actual charge of the television programming, somebody who had been there long before Sandy Weiner had come. That was adjusted and worked out and I expect that Sandy Weiner will continue with the campaign too."

Alioto told the Independent Press-Telegram that "when you're handling the kind of coalition I'm handling—when you're trying for that broad a coalition—there are bound to be disparate elements but they are being worked into a fine, cohesive organization."

"When you're active, when you're doing things, you have to smooth out a campaign organization and I am positive we'll have it all smoothed out by March 15 for the final big push in the last 75 days."

"So, Mr. O'Brien will be

MAYOR JOSEPH ALIOTO
'A Lot of Nonsense'

with us, Mr. Weiner will be with us and Mr. Claude Jarman will be doing the basic television work.

"Withdraw? Nonsense. Our billboards went up today, 10 great, picture-size, hand-painted billboards in the Los Angeles area. That's the start of the overt campaign. We'll be doing extensive radio by the end of the month, television by the end of April."

Weiner, reached in San Francisco, said Alioto's account of their relationship was accurate.

When Preuses disagree; gurus, prophets, refugees

By LES RODNEY

Faced with the mounting possibility of a disastrous schism, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod may explore the calling of a new convention.

Presidents of the 3-million member Synod's North American districts will meet March 18 in Chicago. We learn that Rev. Waldemar Meyer, president of the Colorado district, has sent letters to the other 39 leaders to sound them out on the idea. He reports a feeling that this may be the road to end the impasse over doctrine that has shattered Concordia Seminary and split the denomination almost down the middle.

Headed by President Jacob Preus, the conservative faction, which favors literal interpretation of the Bible, dominated last summer's meeting in New Orleans. The president of Concordia, Dr. John Tietjen, was ousted on charges of teaching false doctrine, and 39 faculty members who backed him and refused to return to classes were fired. Almost all the students have followed them into a seminary-in-exile.

What could a new convention do? Some who favor Preus' doctrinal views and voted with him at New Orleans now feel he has acted like a bull in a china shop and would seek reconciliation. Others, particularly in the pews, think Preus has acted properly, that either you believe in the Bible literally or you don't, and they would be happy to have the so-called moderates leave the Synod. It is difficult to discern a solution, without someone giving a lot of ground. There is no real indication of this.

HOW ABOUT the other branches of the Lutheran family in all this? After expressing the American Lutheran Church's "deep distress" over the situation, Rev. Dr. David W. Preus, ALC president, went on to express disagreement with the posture of his cousin Jacob. (The ALC has had altar and pulpit fellowship with the more conservative Missouri Synod.)

David Preus made his position clear enough by saying that the ALC holds itself to be under the Scriptures and faithful to the Lutheran Confession, but also cherishes the tradition of freedom to speak openly, to take sides and debate matters on which Scriptures and Confessions do not speak clearly and directly.

"We do not think it wise or helpful to adopt official positions on the many controverted matters that constantly face the church," he said. "We prefer to allow the Spirit to operate freely in an open context, with Lutherans accepting each other as brothers and sisters, even in disagreement over less than confessional matters."

"We do not envision complete, agreed upon answers to all questions as either possible or desirable. We are fearful of any attempt to establish standards of orthodoxy that go beyond the historic Lutheran Confessions." The ALC Preus referred to the Missouri controversy as "a family disaster."

"We sincerely wish it were possible for us to be helpful," he said, "but we do not know how."

Dr. Jacob Preus, incidentally, has made no bones about his displeasure with the Roman Catholic Church and the United Church of Christ, whose St. Louis University and Eden Seminary offered space for the seminary-in-exile. Both disclaimed taking sides in the dispute, but from Preus' point of view their action could scarcely be seen otherwise.

ONE OF AMERICA'S more knowledgeable men on Eastern and Oriental religious cults, Dr. Aghanada Bharati, says that most of the guru cults that have spread in this country, particularly among young people, are "easy sell counterfeits," not the real thing. Dr. Bharati has studied as a Hindu monk in India and Tibet, and is now chairman of the anthropology department of Syracuse University in New York.

CONTINUING ITS program of publishing for mass distribution separate entities of Scripture in the popular Today's English Version, the American Bible Society today publishes "Justice Now," the three Old Testament books of Hosea, Amos and Micah.

These were the Hebrew prophets who were regarded as God's spokesmen to the ancient Israelites. They told of events to come, and challenged the civil and religious establishments of their day as being untruthful, dictatorial, corrupt and unresponsive to the needs of the people.

Justice Now can be ordered from the Society,

Dept. S, Grand Central Station, P.O. Box 3537, New York, N.Y. 10017. The order number is 04440 and the price is 10 cents each, which includes postage.

SHOWING ITS journalistic caliber, the magazine Christianity Today includes in its list of 25 "choice evangelical books of the year" the book "A History of Fundamentalism in America" published by Bob Jones University Press, despite the book's highly critical stance toward the magazine.

FACTUAL NOTE for the particular attention of those who attack the United States and praise the Soviet Union in relation to the Arab refugees: The U.S. has given some $548 million to help the refugees through UNRWA—the United Nations Relief and Works Agency. The Soviet contribution? Not one red cent.

In newspaper poll

Aides hit for 'rating' lawmakers

SACRAMENTO (AP)—The California Senate scolded its staff members Friday for participating in a poll rating members of the Legislature for effectiveness, intelligence and integrity.

Telling a reporter what staffers think of lawmakers endangers the public interest, a letter from Senate President Pro Tem James Mills said.

Mills called it "intolerable."

"It should be clear that it is not the function of staff members to engage in any 'rating' of members of the Senate," Mills said in a letter to staff members.

"It should have been clear to anyone approached on this project that to participate in any such 'rating' is totally unbecoming a person enjoying staff status," the letter said.

"In addition to all the other considerations, it poses such serious threats to a proper legislative-staff relationship that it endangers the public interest and becomes intolerable," the letter added.

Thirty-three committee consultants and staff aides participated in the rating, conducted by San Francisco Examiner capitol correspondent Dennis Opatmy. Their names were not used for fear of reprisals from lawmakers. The ratings were published last Sunday.

State Sen. James Q. Wedworth of Hawthorne, a Democratic candidate for governor, was rated unanimously as the least intelligent and effective of the state's 40 senators.

DEMOCRATIC state Sen. Lawrence Walsh of Huntington Park, a candidate for lieutenant governor, was rated the second least intelligent member of the Senate and the senator with the least political principles. Republican Sen. Lou Cusanovich was rated third from the bottom in intelligence.

Sen. Anthony Beilenson, a Democrat from Beverly Hills, was rated by the staff members as the most intelligent member of the Senate, followed by a tie for smartness between Sens. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, and Peter Behr, R-Tiburon.

On the Assembly side, the staffers said San Francisco Democrat Willie Brown was the smartest followed by Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, John Knox, D-Richmond, and Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills.

SANTA BARBARA Republican W. Don MacGillivray was rated the least intelligent member of the Assembly followed by Alex Garcia, D-Los Angeles, Floyd Wakefield, R-South Gate and John Thurman, D-Modesto.

A compilation of the staff opinions showed they rated Democrats as more intelligent than Republicans. But at the same time, the compilation showed the staffers believed Democrats were less politically principled than their GOP colleagues. Democrats were more effective in making things happen legislatively or stopping them cold, the surveyed staffers said.

election code requirement that candidates be registered in their chosen party for at least a year preceding the election. Hayakawa changed from Democrat to Republican last summer.

The poll, which surveyed 1,179 Californians from Feb. 2-11, showed 51 per cent of Republican voters favoring Hayakawa; 23 per cent preferring State Sen. H.C. Richardson of Arcadia, and 10 per cent choosing former state Health and Welfare Director Earl Brian.

When pitted against the Democratic incumbent, Sen. Alan Cranston, Hayakawa also proved strongest of the three Republicans, receiving 38 per cent support to Cranston's 52 per cent. Richardson and Brian gathered 27 per cent and 24 per cent support respectively.

Poll finds Hayakawa GOP's top candidate for Senate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Former college president S.I. Hayakawa would have been a leading contender for the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate if a court decision hadn't disqualified him, the California Poll said Friday.

Hayakawa, a semantist who retired last year as head of San Francisco State University, said he might encourage a write-in vote, after the state Supreme Court ruled his name couldn't appear on the June primary ballot.

The court ruled on an

Suit seeks to change state's 'winner-take-all' primary rule

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A suit seeking a change in California's "winner take all" presidential primary elections was filed Friday in federal court.

The suit by Belmont attorney James S. Graham, 26, asks that a three-judge court declare the system unconstitutional and therefore void. The "winner-take-all" system commits the entire delegation to the candidate with the most votes instead of parceling votes out proportionately to all the candidates.

Defendants are the Republican State Central Committee and Edmund G. Brown, Jr., who as secretary of state must certify election returns.

Graham said in the suit that he did not ask the court to devise a new system, since that would be a legislative matter.

Also calls for impeachment

Church Council spurns demands of militants

In its four-day meeting in Los Angeles this week, the Governing Board of the National Council of Churches wound up calling on Congress to act "expeditiously" on impeachment proceedings, so that the President "may have his day in court, and full opportunity is given to restore confidence in the office of the President of the United States."

Along the four-day trail, which mostly consisted of serious, smaller-group meetings on specific aspects of mission, the Council rejected and rebuked an attempt by a group of black militants from New York to impose a "tithe" on the Council, and to fire Claire Randall, first woman executive secretary of the cooperative agency, which embraces 82 Protestant and Orthodox groups in the country.

The militant group, which previously had seized part of the Council offices in New York, called Dr. Randall a racist, apparently based on a general remark she made in her speech of acceptance about the decade of the woman having followed the decade of black advances. Miss Randall has a long record of fighting for equal rights for all.

The governing board decided to allot the black militants a half hour to formally present their case to a plenary session. Following this the vote was an overwhelming 83-11 to reject all their demands. Many blacks were among the majority.

A veteran Council spokesman, commenting to the I.P.T. reporter on the significance of this minor tempest, said:

"This is just outdated nonsense, not to be taken seriously by serious people. They are still back in the '60s, trying to play on white guilt, and making preposterous claims and demands. This nonsense, if we let it, would just get in the way of serious efforts to educate on racism and fight against racism."

The Board spent its first half day in a wide ranging discussion on the roots of remaining racism in the land. The Council historically has played a prominent role in this regard, often being attacked for early advocacy of measures which later were recognized by most people as necessary.

The resolution on impeachment, acknowledged that the procedures "will be a trying experience for the people of the United States," but declared that "a nation is only as strong as the moral will it can muster to face its internal problems and resolve them through the orderly processes provided by its far-sighted founders."

It based its need to speak out on the subject on the Gospel, "which compels us to be concerned about the moral and ethical condition of the nation." To remain silent, the resolution said, "would be to abdicate the responsibility to which we are called, and in effect to approve and consent to the existing situation."

Rev. Schneider dies at 63

Friends may call all day today and Sunday at Mottell's Mortuary to pay final respects to Rev. Abe Schneider, founder and director of the Hebrew Messianic Center, who died last week at the age of 63.

Rev. Schneider, a native of New Jersey who converted from Judaism to Christianity and specialized in witnessing to Jews, was a resident of Los Angeles. His voice was familiar to listeners to radio station KGER, one of the many outlets for his 25-year radio ministry. He also spoke at various Long Beach churches.

'Work of devil' — Armstrong

Resignations by top ministers in the Worldwide Church of God were attacked as "all-out war by Satan" by 81-year-old Herbert W. Armstrong, church founder. But his son, Garner Ted Armstrong, was more conciliatory this week, according to the Pasadena Star-News.

Previously 20 ministers and lay leaders had been suspended in a move by the elder Armstrong to quell a revolt against his leadership.

Over the last few months six ministers had resigned, complaining of doctrinal disagreements, lavish spending by the church and the conduct of the younger Armstrong.

The elder Armstrong warned that "the time has come to get those out of the church who are causing division. The Bible says we should. As soon as Satan's ministers are spotted they will be put out."

He also said that the 20 had been fired, not suspended.

But the younger Armstrong, radio evangelist on the church-sponsored "World Tomorrow" programs, said, "We appeal to those men the dissidents to say: 'I am sorry, and let's talk about it.' We are not fighting those men."

'Tex' is back

Rev. Glenn (Tex) Evans, United Methodist minister, "roving ambassador for the Lord," whose homey wit has enlivened many conventions, will speak Sunday, 6 p.m., to launch the Lenten season at Grace United Methodist Church, Third and Junipero. Evans was cited for his work while superintendent of the Henderson Settlement in the Appalachian region of Kentucky, where he led a regeneration of the land.

In Lakewood

Rev. Luverne C. Tengbom, who with his wife Mildred spent 10 years in African missionary work in Tanzania, and on the faculty of the Lutheran Bible School in that country, will lead three Wednesday night Lenten studies at 7:30 p.m. starting next Wednesday at Mount Olivet Lutheran Church of Lakewood, 4405 E. South St. Mrs. Tengbom, author of the book "Is Your God Big Enough?" will lead the last two Wednesdays March 27 and April 3. All are invited.

He himself is a Presbyterian, he said, though not ordained in that denomination, and former Catholics and Baptists make up "a good percentage" of the young people, he added. "Many had formerly been on drugs, and few had a church background before."

He said the group was recently invited to Hollywood Presbyterian Church, where they put on a "charismatic" demonstration.

Asked what his qualifications are for healing at the Saturday night Long Beach sessions, he replied that he brings into play a charismatic gift, "the word of knowledge." "What is the word of knowledge?"

"It tells who is being healed," he replied. "The Lord will tell me if an ear is opening. I'll have a pop in my own ear. The Holy Spirit will indicate to others in the audience. One girl was healed of diabetes right there. Blindness, cancer too."

Weekly 'healing' services draw 1,000 in Long Beach

Long Beach has its own thriving version of the "miracle services" of Kathryn Kuhlman in Los Angeles.

It's the Shekinah Fellowship, predominately youthful but with growing representation among adults. In three years the Saturday night meetings, which include the laying on of hands, falling backward by those touched, talking in tongues, and the claims of healing of serious ailments, has grown to a regular attendance of 900 to 1,000.

The interdenominational Pentecostal youth group meets in First Foursquare Church, 2416 E. 11th St., every Saturday night, courtesy of the pastor, Rev. Billy Adams. (Foursquare churches are the legacy of evangelist Aimee Semple MacPherson.) Adams made his sanctuary available after Shekinah outgrew its modest headquarters at 2234 E. Seventh St., still used during the week.

Following what is called fundamental Bible lessons, a 125-voice white gownned choir sings, and 25-year-old minister Brant Baker performs his healing service, aided by 200 mostly high school teenagers who circulate through the audience to minister to others.

Baker, a tall young man with shining eyes, said this week that the alleged healing began with the group's early Bible meetings. "We began praying for people with special needs," he said. "They would come sick and leave well."

He himself is a Presbyterian, he said, though not ordained in that denomination, and former Catholics and Baptists make up "a good percentage" of the young people, he added. "Many had formerly been on drugs, and few had a church background before."

He said the group was recently invited to Hollywood Presbyterian Church, where they put on a "charismatic" demonstration.

Asked what his qualifications are for healing at the Saturday night Long Beach sessions, he replied that he brings into play a charismatic gift, "the word of knowledge." "What is the word of knowledge?"

"It tells who is being healed," he replied. "The Lord will tell me if an ear is opening. I'll have a pop in my own ear. The Holy Spirit will indicate to others in the audience. One girl was healed of diabetes right there. Blindness, cancer too."

BRANT BAKER, youthful Shekinah leader, lays hands on two persons simultaneously at Saturday night "healing service" in Long Beach. Those touched usually then fall backwards, impelled, Baker says, by the power of the Holy Spirit.

"We pray for them, and lay on hands. They usually fall over. I don't push them, the Spirit comes upon them; as a miracle sign, to show non-believers, and some Christians too."

There are 20 young women now with the "word of knowledge" to help him, he continued. How do they attain it? "It's a gift of grace, given to help effect the healing, and the testimony that provides."

People of all ages are welcome he said, and a free will offering is taken for the fellowship's work.

As for the controversial speaking in tongues, he says: "It is the least of the gifts, but if you can't receive the least of the gifts, you can't receive the others. You know, whenever someone doesn't like the power of the Holy Spirit, they jump on the tongues thing."

Pastor Adams calls the young people of Shekinah (from Hebrew, meaning the presence and glory of God) "wonderful young Christians who have enriched the life of our church too. It works both ways, we have each given to the other. Our people are enthusiastic about their presence."

church too. It works both ways, we have each given to the other. Our people are enthusiastic about their presence."

Baker was asked if any "bad actors" turn up among the youngsters, and if some young people with less than religious motivations come around. The ratio of members is about 60-40 in favor of girls.

He laughed and shook his head negatively. "We are so strict, you wouldn't believe it. Our Bible studies prepare everyone. If a wolf came around, he wouldn't get anywhere, any more than false doctrine would."

But there are romances. "Oh, we've had almost 30 weddings of members."

It's the "rapture rush," suggested Adams, "to beat the deadline for the imminent second coming of Jesus." They believe this will be soon, and that true believers will be "raptured," going up into heaven to join Jesus for seven years.

How soon do they expect this? "Oh, this is definitely the last generation," said Baker. "We don't guess an exact date, but all the biblical signs are here. We talk about this all the time."

It is this feeling of the imminence of the second coming which gives evangelistic urgency to their mission, the young minister said. They want to reach and save as many as possible in the time left.

That's why, he explained, they have rented Municipal Auditorium, "on faith" for a four day series of meetings April 4th to 7th, featuring "divine healing services" along with the music and Bible study.

"God bless you! And if you don't want me to talk shop, you'll have to stop sneezing!"

SET INTERFAITH SEMINAR ON AGING

An interfaith workshop on aging will be held Thursday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in First United Methodist Church, Fifth Street and Pacific Avenue.

Sponsored by the local Council of Churches, Catholic Social Services, Jewish Community Center and United Way Regent III, it is designed, the sponsors explain, "to provide helpful information and resources for elderly people and to religious groups desiring to minister more effectively to the aging."

A wide variety of subjects relating to the elderly will be discussed in the morning session by "resource people." The afternoon will feature group discussions by neighborhood clusters.

Cost of the day, including the noon meal, is $2.50 per person, payable to the Long Beach Area Council of Churches.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Self exorcism

A current phenomenon is the amazing interest in exorcism. An example is the dramatic success of "The Exorcist" by William Peter Blatty, now a best seller. The movie is currently the number one box-office draw all across the nation. In Chicago its showing in a quiet neighborhood theatre brought thousands trampling lawns, cars parked illegally on the sidewalks, and a theatre besieged by people averse to see this presentation.

Although one cannot deny that this subject is sensational and attention-getting, the whole concept of exorcism is neither new nor modern. The Bible dealt with it long ago and did so in a scientific, factual manner.

St. Mark graphically describes how Jesus went through the towns and villages around about Capernaum healing disease and driving devils out of the unhappy people possessed by them. One of his skills was the effective exorcism of demons.

What were those devils? Were they evil, displaced spirits that somehow got into people? That of course is what people in those times believed and many seem to hold the same idea currently.

TODAY WE know more about such phenomena but the problem is still a real one. A psychiatrist not long ago actually expressed the conviction that some contemporary people are possessed by demons. Perhaps most of these are not clearly defined as demons requiring the services of an exorcist to dispossess them, but that a real problem is involved seems unquestioned. Modern well-trained pastors working with psychological medicine have had valid success in this field.

One demon most commonly possessing people today is that of fear. What better way to describe fear than as a demonic force? When you harbor fear in your mind, you well know you have some fiendish being in you which can cause you to live in your own hell. This devil and this hell is very real to the unfortunate person who is haunted by fear.

And another is the demon hate. Look deeply into the eyes of anyone who hates and you will see the misery which his personal demon causes him. There are many other kinds of devils: lack of confidence, inadequacy, inferiority, shyness, sense of defeat. And sadly enough many of us are possessed of one or more of these at the same time. But fortunately these demons can be cast out. We can get free of them.

There is a significant statement in the gospel of St. Luke (9:1) in which Jesus gave his disciples "power and authority over all devils." My Sunday talks are mailed monthly to over 600,000 people and after this particular one was issued which dealt with exorcism, I received a letter from a man who said he had been astonished to learn there was any such statement as that in the Bible. He looked it up for himself and it gave him the first hope that he could solve his inner conflicts. He realized then that his trouble was that he had been "hounded by a devil for years." So he decided actually to act on that Bible promise. He deliberately put it into practice.

THIS IS what he did. He stood up and in a firm, assertive voice said, "In the name of God, I take authority over this devil and I drive it out in His name." He continued to do this daily. And, he wrote me that the particular devil which had been disturbing him all those years grew weaker and finally left altogether. After persistent treatments of this nature, he states that he had the power to exorcise his personal demon.

This is an interesting illustration of two important facts about inner conflict. First, it does not need to remain a permanent condition and, second, we should strongly take charge of our lives. We can do something about our inner devils. It is important to recognize the existence of any defeating and destructive qualities within the personality. Then we need to rise up in spiritual power and take authority over our inner devils in the name of Christ.

You may protest it is much too much to suggest that there is any such thing as a devil in you. Well you might try taking a long look in a mirror.

Lutheran takes dim view of exorcism

It is a sad day when Christians become more excited about devils than about God, Rev. Dr. Walter R. Wietzke, director of the Division for Theological Education and Ministry of the American Lutheran Church, said in a recent statement about demon possession and exorcism.

The document was issued by the ALC for the purpose of bringing "proper theological perspectives" into the situation which finds a large proportion of contemporary society engrossed with demon possession and other "supernatural" phenomena, Dr. Wietzke said.

Current interest in the subject, the statement said, is an indication of "a heritance in modern man that is more frightening than the distorted, outlandish, and superstitious claims of practicing exorcists."

Wietzke deplores what he describes as a situation in which "tales of horror and alleged spectacular deliverances" are given greater credibility and reception than the Gospel and growing in wisdom and grace.

"The line between faith and superstition is a thin one," the document declares. It describes as a "delusion" the supposition that the supernatural is attained by the irrational.

"When a utopian minded people become disillusioned with their hoped for 'paradise' and become distraught with persistent expressions of evil, the temptation is great to look for reasons coming from the outside — from the underworld," the statement observes.

By falling victim to such temptation, it continues, people "avoid the necessity of confronting their own basic sinfulness, and find it is another escape."

"So, as the irrational becomes an avenue to the supernatural, and devils become scapegoats for human sin, there follows a public-wide expression of morbid curiosity with the subject and a situation is created for easy exploitation by theatrical hucksters and by some persons seeking to authenticate marginal ministries.

"Chronologically, we are a thousand years removed from the dark ages, but psychologically and theologically the battle has to be fought anew in every generation," the statement concludes.

Kuhlman 'must speak out' on exorcism

Kathryn Kuhlman, known for her ministry of "Christian healing," will speak out on the controversial topic of exorcism at the Anaheim Convention Center, March 16, 7:30 p.m.

The radio and television woman preacher says "it's time to speak out about exorcism particularly when millions of young people are leaving theaters across North America with the frightening fear that they may be demon possessed."

"Demon possession is a very real thing, but someone must speak out on it to curb the mass hysteria which is so prevalent today as a result of the movie," said Miss Kuhlman who says her ministry is not one of casting out demons, but rather a Christian healing ministry.

Kuhlman felt that a male evangelist of national prominence should have spoken out on exorcism long before now.

"I didn't think that I a woman with a totally different kind of ministry should be the one to speak out on exorcism," she said, "but since no man is coming forward to dispel the fears about exorcism, I will do it for I can't stand to see teenagers living in the fear of demon possession."

Bible study for Lent at St. Anthony

A Lenten period adult education program on Bible Study will be held each Monday evening from 7:30 to 9 in the St. Anthony High School cafeteria, 863 E. Sixth St. All are welcome.

Starting this Monday, Mar. 4th, the course topics include how to get the most out of reading the Bible, what's new in the Old Testament, how to pray the Psalms, Jesus as God-man in the gospels, and James' letter on being a Christian today.

The course is sponsored by the school in cooperation with the adult education program of the Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles. It will conclude with celebration of the Eucharist on the Monday evening of Holy Week. Refreshments will be served.

Seminar against evolution

A Creation Science Seminar to "refute the evolutionary hypothesis of the creation of man" will be hosted next Friday and Saturday, Mar. 8 and 9, at Bethany Baptist Church, 2250 Clark Ave.

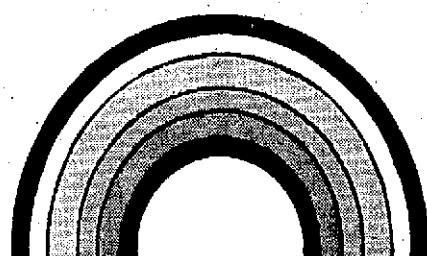

It will be conducted by Dr. Henry Morris and Dr. Duane Gish of the Institute for Creation Research in San Diego. Both are prominent scientists and have written books dealing in scholarly and scientific fashion with their view of the falseness of evolution. They have also provided text books for the public school system where Biblical Creation is to be taught alongside of the evolutionary hypothesis of man's origin.

The public is invited, with a registration fee charged. Contact the church for further details; it is suggested.

Orthodox Lent

Eastern Orthodox Christians from throughout Southern California will observe the first Sunday of Lent at a Great Vesper Service to be held 7:30 p.m., Sunday, in the St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Cathedral, Los Angeles.

Christian Science

"All things work together for good to them that love God."
Romans 8:28

Trusting God for all good, you can see a pattern of progress in your life. Even trials become opportunities for healing and for improvement, as the Bible shows.

At our testimony meeting this Wednesday, you will hear others tell how they've drawn closer to God and felt his gentle control of their lives. And often they tell how their understanding of God has healed them of sickness, grief, loneliness, fear, lack.

We hope you'll visit soon.

Fraud charged to Maheu

United Press International
 "Attorneys for Howard Hughes' Summa Corp. charged Friday in Los Angeles that Robert Maheu falsified payroll records for guards at Hughes properties in Tucson, Ariz., and pocketed money supposed to have gone to salaries.
 A deposition was read from former Tucson police Chief Bernard L. Garmire at the afternoon session of the trial of Maheu's $17.3 million libel suit against Hughes.
 The Garmire deposition said the chief arranged to have Maheu use off-duty policemen to guard properties he was acquiring for Hughes in Tucson.
 Hughes' attorneys sought to show Maheu told his employer he had hired double the number of security personnel he had in fact put on the payroll and he appropriated for his own use the salaries of the fictitious guards.
 MORTON Galane, chief attorney for Maheu, told the jury he would prove that Maheu never misused or misappropriated any Hughes money, property or personnel.

Mistrial on Nazi riot incite count

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A judge declared a mistrial Friday in the case of a teacher charged with inciting the audience at a school board integration meeting to riot against a group of protesting uniformed Nazis.
 Municipal Court Judge George Maloney set March 5 for a hearing on Asst. Dist. Atty. Thomas Cray's motion that teacher Yvonne Golden be retried. Defense attorney Vincent Hallinan said the mistrial means Miss Golden cannot be retried because of protection against double jeopardy.
 Maloney said he declared the mistrial because jurors overheard an in-chambers argument between Hallinan and Cray. He also cited Cray's failure to call a significant number of witnesses.
 The charge stemmed from the Jan. 8 Board of Education meeting here when police broke up a fist fight between 13 uniformed Nazis and several person in the audience. Ten members of the Workers Action Movement still face trial on charges from that melee.

Reagan signs judges pension funding law

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Reagan Friday signed legislation providing $578,000 to help finance the state's lucrative retirement plan for judges.
 The bill (SB1617) by Sen. Alfred Song, D-Monterey Park, cleared the Assembly Thursday despite objections that the constant practice of funding the system on a year to year basis prevented needed reforms.
 A recent study by Actuarial Systems Inc. of San Jose labeled the current method of financing as "makeshift" and recommended major steps to make it sound.
 Under the system judges can retire at age 70 at up to 75 per cent of the salary of the judicial office last held. Salaries range from about $35,000 annually for municipal judges to about $48,000 for state Supreme Court justices.
 In arguing for Assembly passage, Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, said the appropriation was needed to pay for pension checks to be mailed this week.
 However some assemblymen argued that if the Legislature approves such "urgency" appropriation every year to keep the fund in the black, the necessary reforms will never be made.

$58.5 million Thums sets budget for fiscal year

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

A proposed $58.5-million budget and a plan of development and operations for the Long Beach unit of the Wilmington Oil Field in fiscal 1974-75 will be submitted Tuesday to the City Council.

The budget and plan were prepared by Thums Long Beach Co., the field contractor, under direction of the city's Department of Oil Properties.

City Manager John R. Mansell called the plan and budget "a conservative estimate of expenditures, with no provisions for any contingency items."

The major item of the budget is $31.1 million in "operating expense," which includes estimated costs of operating the unit's oil wells, injection wells and their related support systems, according to the report signed by T. S. Richards, general manager of Thums Long Beach Co.

THE BUDGET earmarks $7.6 million for development drilling and other well work, and $13.5 million for taxes and assessments.

Mansell said it also is estimated that about $2 million will be added to cover investment projects carried in from the prior budget period, bringing the total estimated expenditures for the year to $60.5 million.

Richards said it is anticipated that 35 wells will be drilled during the year, bringing the total number of wells in the unit to 731. The drilling will take place on all four islands and from Pier J.

As of last Dec. 31, a total of 685 wells had been drilled and completed in thums - 2 the unit, 536 of them as producers and 149 as injection wells. During December, the average net oil production rate was 108,183 barrels per day. The average water production was 257,771 barrels per day, and gas production averaged 31,724,000 cubic feet per day. The average daily rate of water injection was 518,760 barrels.

THE OPERATING plan noted that voting parties in the Long Beach unit adopted a resolution last Dec. 20 establishing a goal of 800,000 barrels per day water injection by the end of 1976.

Anticipated effects of greater water injection, the report said, will be better economic return, through shorter life and less overall operating costs; increased oil production rates beginning in the next few years; and increased oil recovery.

Aussie flattop here with war relic gifts

By BUCK LANIER
Staff Writer

The Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne Friday unloaded 40 tons of nostalgia at the Long Beach Navy Base—relics from South Pacific World War II battlefields.

The relics, destined for the Adm. Chester W. Nimitz Center at Fredericksburg, Texas, are a gift from the government and people of Australia.

The Melbourne is commanded by Capt. Guy R. Griffiths. As skipper of the frigate Hobart, Griffiths was in Long Beach for three months in early 1966 while his vessel was undergoing work at the naval shipyard.

Griffiths said his carrier would not be open to the public this weekend because he plans to let all of his crew take shore leave.

The Melbourne's war relic cargo includes a Japanese Aichi dive bomber, an aircraft that gave Allied shipping a hard time in the early days of the war.

The Aichi, shot down over Borneo, had no tail when it was found in the jungle. The Australians restored the missing tail by cannibalizing another Aichi.

ANOTHER MUSEUM piece is an Australian Stuart M3 light tank, a veteran of action in the North African western desert before it was shipped to New Guinea. The tank was knocked out by the Japanese in bitter fighting near Buna, killing two Australian soldiers.

The Melbourne's last call during her visit to the United States will be at Alameda, where she will pick up 18 helicopters, purchased from this country, for the Royal Australian Air Force. A second assignment at Alameda is to unload Australia's $1 million exhibit for Expo '74, scheduled for Spokane, Wash., from May through October.

GRIFFITHS, who arrived at Long Beach on his 45th birthday, termed the visit a "unique present."

He added that it "is a privilege to bring the relics to the Nimitz museum, which so well honors your Pacific fleet leader in World War II."

The Melbourne leaves Long Beach Monday morning.

Barbershoppers to sing tonight

Council OK for airport office trade

An exchange of leased space in the Long Beach Airport terminal building between Western Airlines and Pacific Southwest Airlines to give PSA larger quarters has been approved by the City Council.

City Manager John R. Mansell explained that the office exchange was arranged by the two airlines after Western's request for a three-year temporary suspension of its Long Beach service was approved last Oct. 28 by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The larger area being acquired by PSA is "centrally located and functionally more suitable," Mansell said, while Western will benefit from a savings in monthly rental.

Under the amended leases, PSA will be paying the city $461 a month, while Western's monthly rent will be $364.

The 29th annual barber-shop harmony show of the Long Beach Chapter, Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, will be held at 8 tonight in the Millikan High School auditorium.

The two-and-a-half hour show is built around the chapter's 50-man chorus, but features a number of local and area quartets.

Among the visiting quartets is Kidder and Sons, Inc., which is made up of Lt. Col. Don Kidder of Travis Air Force Base and his sons, Aaron, 16; Todd, 14, and Scott, 12. After winning a world-wide military talent contest, they were featured on the Ed Sullivan television show in 1971.

Local quartets feature the Firehouse Four, which includes Long Beach fireman Cecil Sams and his son, Jim; Paul Hudson, pastor of Crossroads Community Church, and Bill Young; and the Escapades, consisting of Bob Dirk, Tom O'Brien, Troy

Zook and the Long Beach chapter president, Bob Benfield.

Proceeds from the concert will help finance the Institute of Logopedics in Wichita, Kan., which treats speech defects in adults and children. Since 1964, the SPEBSQSA has raised more than $1 million for the institute.

Primary expansion work due at A-plant

Initial site preparation for construction of two controversial generating units at the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station is scheduled to begin Monday, Southern California Edison Co. officials said Friday.

The $1.4 billion expansion, which received approval of the Coastal Conservation Commission last week, will be constructed by the Edison Company in cooperation with the San Diego Gas and Electric Co.

Officials said actual construction of the two units, due to begin operations in 1979 and 1980, is scheduled to begin in mid-summer. The initial site work will consist of clearing the land — including demolition of the existing information center — establishing working offices at the site and preparing an off-highway "haul route" to be used during excavation for the new units.

Though the additions have been scored by environmentalists, who say their construction will ruin the scenic coastal bluffs, and flayed by officials concerned about a breakdown last fall in the existing plant, Edison won 22 state and federal regulatory approvals before receiving the final construction permit.

A three-year delay in the project has added half a billion dollars to its cost, and that increase "must ultimately be borne by the ratepayer," said William R. Gould, Edison executive vice president.

He said Edison will operate the units when they are completed, but San Diego Gas and Electric Co. is contributing 20 per cent to their construction.

Food, clothes asked for center

The Veterans Assistance Community Club of Long Beach is staging a continuing drive for food and clothing for donation to the North Long Beach Neighborhood Center, according to Bob Lowe, president of the group.

The drive is being conducted house-to-house by members and "junior members," he said. Additionally, donations of canned goods and clothes during daytime hours may be left at the home of Emma Pearson, 2098 Lewis Ave., said Lowe.

Items for donation also may be left at Lowe's residence—the program's collection point—evenings, he added. Lowe's home is at 2094 Lewis Ave.

Ocean part of coast plan set

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

One piece in the conservationists' jigsaw puzzle that will ultimately take shape as the California Coastal Zone Conservation Plan is scheduled for a public hearing before the regional coastal commission at 3 p.m. Monday in the Long Beach Harbor Department.

Executive Director Mel Carpenter said the 12-member panel will accept written and oral criticism of the Marine Environment Element, first of the series of recommendations for preservation and recreational use of the coastline the regional commission must forward to the state commission.

COPIES of the proposed marine element for Los Angeles and Orange counties have already been distributed to persons on the regional commission's mailing list, Carpenter said.

He added, however, that anyone may participate in the public hearing, which is expected to include discussion on marine habitats, pollution and commercial and sport fisheries.

Among other things, the study — which is a draft subject to change before final approval — says "potential for habitat restoration is negligible" in the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor area. It adds, though, that "improvements in water quality should be encouraged."

COMMISSION Chairman Dr. Donald B. Bright, a biologist, said the draft is awaiting "the input of the public." Once the public hearing is concluded, the plan will be returned to the commission's staff for reevaluation and "necessary changes" before it is approved by the commission, Bright added.

It will then be sent to the state commission, which must combine it with similar plans submitted by the other five regional commissions. The entire coastal zone plan, of which the marine element is only a small part, must be submitted to the state Legislature by Dec. 1, 1975.

New pay hike asked for L.B. employees

A request from the Municipal Engineering Association that Long Beach city employees get additional raises, effective April 1, has been referred by the City Council to its salary and finance committee for review.

A further comment in the MEA letter, asking the City Council to stop holding "secret meetings" on salary matters drew the ire of Mayor Edwin W. Wade.

"I resent that very much," Wade told Harry A. Lown, MEA president.

Lown said the MEA believed that the council had discussed association salary proposals last June in a "secret meeting," and the mayor took exception to the use of the word "secret."

Lown offered to substitute "private" meeting. Councilman Thomas J. Clark suggested that Lown devote his time before the council to outlining what the association wants.

Lown said the MEA is requesting a 2.7-per-cent pay raise for all city employees, on top of the 2 per cent already scheduled on April 1, and an extra 2.7 per cent for engineering personnel.

LBSU students share rides with car pool

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

More than 2,000 students at Long Beach State University are trying to beat the gasoline shortage by hitchhiking rides through a computerized car pool.

Students, faculty and staff members from Valencia to Escondido have asked that their names, addresses and phone numbers be listed in car pool mailings scheduled to be sent out by Monday, according to Tom Bass, the college's park administrator.

The mailings will give students information on 25 other LBSU commuters who live in the same postal zip code area as they do. It's up to the students to do the rest.

"We've had 2,000 requests so far," Bass said Friday. "The requests are coming in at the rate of 100 to 200 per day."

College officials hope that the car pool will cut vehicle traffic on the crowded, 30,000-student campus, besides alleviating the gasoline shortage.

Bass said another possible advantage of the service is that car poolers may be eligible for lower insurance rates. Many insurance companies have such policies, he said.

There's also a plan in the making to offer a transferable $15 on-campus parking permit to participating vehicles. The charge, which is the same fee now paid for single vehicle parking, will be shared by pool members.

Members of the student Computer Club donated their time to program the computer and for keypunching when the completed forms are returned.

Members of the college's car pool committee worked almost a year on the plan.

Non-drivers can also make use of the pool, Bass said.

The university's experimental tram service has been funded permanently, so it will continue to aid students in getting from far-away parking facilities to their classes.

Some of the money from campus parking fines finances the tram service.

she looks doll-like with her petite face, upturned nose and long, perfectly coiffed brown hair.

But, as Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner has discovered, she doesn't always act as programmed when you wind her up.

Barbi Benton, as the jet set knows well, is Hef's girl. But no longer his roommate.

"I moved into my own apartment five months ago," she remarks. "Why? Because Hef was dating when he was in Chicago, so why shouldn't I be able to date, too?"

"Also he was getting so he never wanted to go outside the house. He was perfectly content to stay home every night, but I like to get out and see what's going on. I must say Hef has improved since I moved into my own apartment. We go out two or three times a week now."

Her world has its drawbacks, such as when the girl wants a career.

Barbi, 24, sings Western. Not well, according to critic Hefner.

"He told me I was wasting my money paying for singing lessons," said Barbi. But she persisted, and she managed to break in her act at a San Fernando Valley night club that features top country and Western stars.

She did well enough to get a booking at the Hacienda in Las Vegas, Nev. Hefner grudgingly gave her a warm-up engagement at the Playboy Club in Century City.

Does all this support the cries of feminists that Hefner is a rich-chauvinist of the male sex?

"OH, HE'S a chauvinist, all right," said Barbi. "Like in backgammon. He'll play the game with me at the house, but not when there are men around for tournaments. Then women are barred. His theory is that it doesn't prove anything to beat a woman at backgammon."

THE LONG GOODBYE — Elliott Gould portrays private detective Philip Marlowe in a stylized treatment of the Raymond Chandler novel. With Nina Van Pallandt and Sterling Hayden. (R)

SUMMER WISHES, WINTER DREAMS — Middle-aged couple Joanne Woodward and Martin Balsam, married 30 years, survey themselves as individuals and as marital partners. (PG)

DON'T LOOK NOW — A psychic drama about a husband and wife tormented by the drowning of their child. Set mainly in Venice. With Julie Christie and John Sutherland. (R)

LAST TANGO IN PARIS — Marlon Brando and beautiful, young Maria Schneider in Bernardo Bertolucci's introspective and often tedious tale of a sexual relationship. (X)

HOOR OF THE WOLF — Ingmar Bergman's unusual story of a painter terrified by his personal demons. With Max von Sydow and Liv Ullmann. (PG)

THE PAPER CHASE — Comedy. Timothy Bottoms, a naive student from the Midwest in his first-year grind at Harvard Law School, is confronted by John Houseman, a brilliant and sarcastic professor. With Lindsay Wagner. (PG)

THE EXORCIST — William Blatty's shocking drama about a young girl possessed by the Devil. Directed by William Friedkin. With Max von Sydow, Ellen Burstyn, Linda Blair, Jason Miller and Lee J. Cobb. (R)

SUPERDAD — Disney romantic-comedy feature. Bob Crane, dismayed by his teenage daughter's friends, wants her to marry a boy much like himself. With Barbara Rush and Kurt Russell. (G)

THE STING — Excellent. Funny, suspenseful and at times touching as 1930s con men Robert Redford and Paul Newman set up the elaborate swindle of a rackets chief. With Robert Shaw. (PG)

MAGNUM FORCE Clint Eastwood portrays Police Inspector Harry Callahan in a violent investigation stemming from assassinations of underworld characters. With Hal Holbrook. (R)

CINDERELLA LIBERTY — An off-beat love story involving James Caan as a sailor on leave who falls for Marsha Mason, a prostitute. With Eli Wallach. (R)

THE WAY WE WERE — Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford in a sentimental and humorous story of the marriage of two persons with different goals in life. (PG)

AMERICAN GRAFFITI — A funny and touching story set in 1962 involving California high schoolers' activities on a September evening. With Richard Dreyfuss. (PG)

"You've got him guarding the midnight snacks again!"

Forecast for Sunday

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Relief is one of the many prevalent sensations as the pressure of your environment shifts a bit. Find a moment for planning next week's schedule.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Listening habits, especially information. Let us well enough alone includes letting others make their own decisions, judgments.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Attention to your limitations may improve your adjustment, extend the amenities of your daily living. You have much to protect and to ease by dedicated responsibility.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let your friends differ without investing your time and emotions in the issues. Social activity is strenuous enough without stirring up random arguments.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your message will declare this a real holiday in your mind away from work-week matters. Should your full share of home and neighborhood responsibility.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The message this Sunday comes from unexpected people. Instead of telling everybody else what to do, concentrate on finding the reasons for what you do.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Creative pastimes offer more than their momentary pleasure — if you will share them sensibly — so that others may add their specialities.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You have more than enough to do and to do well. The new grounds to keep you fully occupied this Sunday. Find time for your share in the community's customs.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Take a slow but sure pace and keep circulating. There are no special surprises on today's special sunrise. Minor details to settle into early.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Now your stray chickens come home to roost. What happens today is largely a consequence of what you've been doing for quite a long while.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Make the best of the things you cannot change. Select the contacts you want to make, begin to mend the old, line up the proper punishment.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't seek to go somewhere for the sake of going. Give yourself some rest and a chance to see more of what you're letting yourself in for.

Panel 1: A woman with short blonde hair asks, "MR JACKSON?". A man in a suit and tie, Mr. Jackson, replies, "NO, NO, NO NO!". He is holding a notepad that shows a small building. A speech bubble from him says "NO, NO, NO NO!". A small box above the notepad says "Drawing of building 3-2".

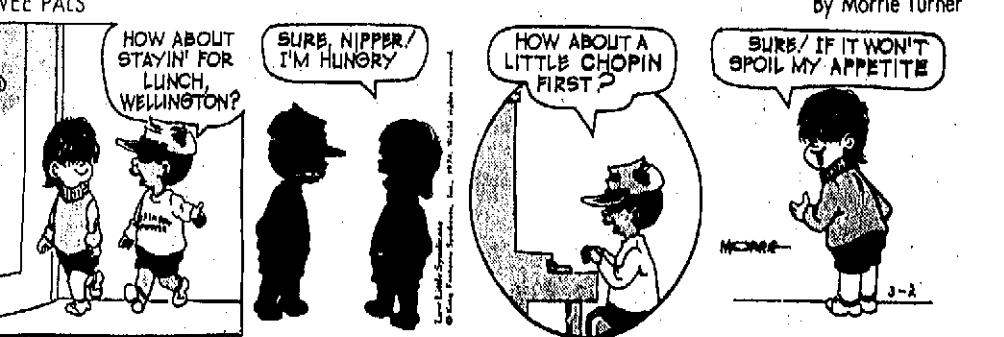

Panel 2: A man in a suit and tie is shouting, "CANCELLED!". He is standing in front of a large, modern building with many windows. A palm tree is visible in the foreground.

Panel 3: The woman and the man are looking at each other with shocked expressions. The woman is wearing a light-colored jacket and glasses. The man is wearing a dark suit and tie. They are both looking at each other with wide eyes and open mouths.

entertain or to present the awards — or both.

Providing entertainment will be host Williams, Al Green, Tony Orlando and Dawn, Stevie Wonder, Charlie Rich, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Steve Mandell and Eric Weissberg, the Ron Field Dancers and the Ray Charles Singers.

PRESENTING the golden statuettes to winners in various music categories will be Chuck Berry, Glen Campbell, the Carpenters, Cher, Alice Cooper, the DeFranco Family, Roberta Flack, Isaac Hayes, the Jackson Five, Kris Kristofferson, Little Richard, Loggins and Messina.

Also, Loretta Lynn, Henry Mancini, Shelley Manne, Zubin Mehta, Maureen McGovern, Helen Reddy, Charlie Rich, Diana Ross, Telly Savalas, Lily Tomlin and John Wayne.

This marks the fourth year in a row for singer Williams to serve as host. Andy has won numerous honors himself over the years and has had 16 Gold Albums, each signifying $1 million in sales.

Andy started his career at age 8 by singing in a church choir with his parents and three older brothers and, as a boy, he and his brothers were performing on radio stations throughout the Midwest.

In 1946 the Williams Brothers joined comedienne Kay Thompson in a nightclub act and toured nationally and abroad for six years.

Andy's first big break in television came as a singer on Steve Allen's "Tonight" show in New York. His two-week contract turned into a three-year stay on that show.

HOLDER OF the most Grammys — 20 — is composer Henry Mancini, one of the presenters on tonight's show.

Mancini was a winner at the first Grammy Awards Show in 1959 and hasn't stopped collecting honors since.

Henry also has won three Oscars.

Sprinters in the spotlight 2,000 OFF AND RUNNING IN L.B. RELAYS

By JOHN DIXON
Staff Writer

The shortest races may draw the longest applause today when the Long Beach Relays premier outdoor track and field, circa '74, to the world.

USC, San Diego State, Beverly Hills Striders, Cal International Track Club and Long Beach State have more sprinters than Santa Anita. If the breezes remain gentle and the speedway dry, there may be a record book rewrite.

There are 179 events scheduled for 2,000 athletes in the Jack Rose-Ron Allie directed '74 Relays, and the most exciting, the university-open 440-yard relay, is on the calendar for 11:20 today.

San Diego State, a come-from-behind conqueror of USC by one-tenth of a second last Saturday, will be anchored by world's fastest human Super Steve Williams, who last year was credited with clockings of 9.1, 20.2, and 45.2. USC will be anchored by import Guy Abrahams, a 9.3 dasher. Willie Deckard (9.2) is the cleanup man for Cal International, David Gloud (9.5) for Long Beach State. Jamaican Olympian Don Quarrie will run third for the Striders, and hand off to Oghenezo Adu.

The winner?

"San Diego State," insists Alice; "If San Diego is within 10 yards of the leader on the last exchange, Williams will catch 'em. He's 10 yards faster than any other sprinter in the United States."

Most of the same teams will face off again in the 880 relay at 2:35 p.m., with San Diego again rating a slim edge, and in the mile relay at 4 p.m. USC ran away from San Diego last week on 440 splits of 48.2 by Earl Richardson, 46.7 by Trevor Campbell, 47.4 by Claude Brown and 47.5 by Greg Jones — a sum of 3:09.9.

Field event feature in the university-open division may be the triple jump. The challengers include Milan Tili of the Striders, a 54-footer who won the National

UCLA at Arizona State

UCLA's national champions open their dual meet season tonight against Arizona State at Tempe.

AAU title last week; David Tucker (54-1) of Long Beach State, national interscholastic record holder; James Butts of the Striders (54-2); Rayfield Dupree (52-3) of Long Beach State, fourth in the nationals in '73, and over-50 footer Jerald Bell of Boise State and Tom Cochee and Ed Washington of USC.

USC, rated 1-2 with UCLA on the early national line, is expected to win more than its share in the university-open division. Cal State Northridge is favored in the college division. Cal State Northridge is favored in the college division. Mesa, Arizona, national champion in four of the last five years, is top-seeded in junior college I, while Santa Ana is a slight choice in JC II. Long Beach and Cerritos are challengers in Division I. Lakewood, Dominguez and Washington of Los Angeles appear strongest among the high-quality high school crowd.

Don't forget your stopwatch — and pillow. The competition at Lakewood High commences at 9 a.m. with high school events, terminates (maybe) at 5:45 p.m. with the open sprint medley relay.

The three-day running and jumping carnival ends Sunday with girls and women's competition, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Tickets will be on sale each day at the gate ($1 adults, 50 cents students).

Laker streak now 6

By DOUG IVES

Nothing comes easy for the Lakers.

Heading for their first one-sided win in a month, the Lakers squandered all but two points of a 17-point lead Friday night before rallying down the stretch to whip Kansas City-Omaha, 107-100, at the Forum.

The victory was their sixth in a row, longest streak of the season, but only 12,715 watched them cut their Pacific Division deficit to a single game.

First place will be at stake Sunday when pace-setting Golden State comes to the Forum. It's the first of three head-to-head meetings between the intra-state rivals.

The Lakers have an unenviable finishing schedule in their uphill bid to qualify for the playoffs. Nine of their remaining 14 games are at home; however, only two are against teams with sub-500 records.

WHEN the Lakers lost seven of eight games recently, the average loss was by 5.6 points. In winning six in a row, the average win has been 4.8. Never have they played so many nailbiters in succession.

Friday's win was unique. In the first and last periods the Lakers shot 63 per cent from the field. In the middle quarters, they were 32 per cent.

Fortunately, they saved the best for last. After the Kings moved to within two points, 78-76, the Lakers gradually pulled away on the shooting of Jim Price and reserve guard Pat Riley. The pair hit six of seven fielders in the final 12 minutes.

Gail Goodrich was off target, missing 16 of 22, but the little Laker connected on 14 of 15 free throws to lead both teams with 26 points.

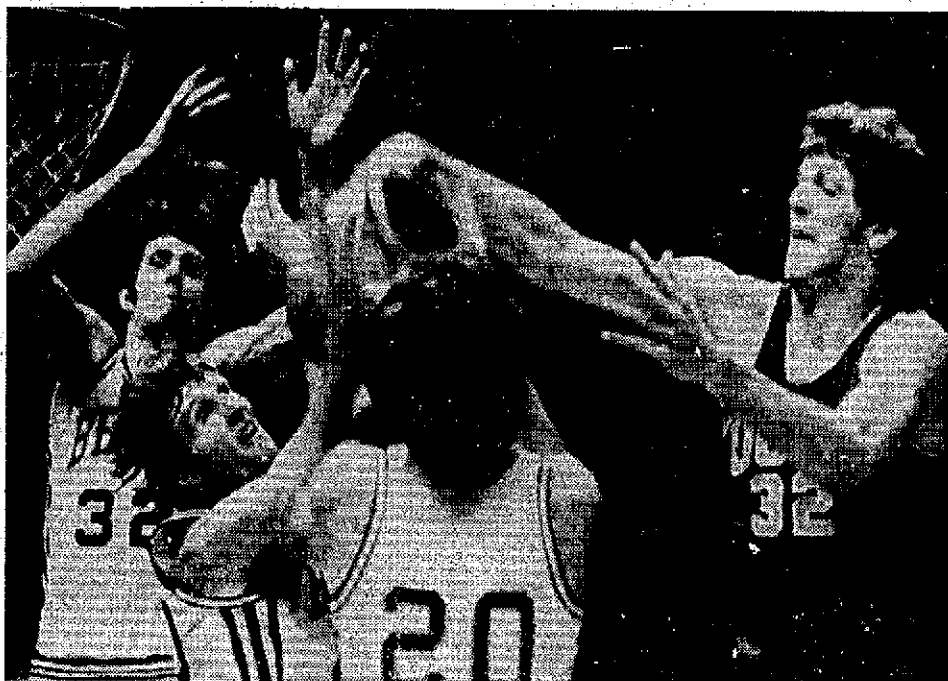

Center Sam Lacey led the Kings, scoring 18 of his 22 points in the second half. Guard Jimmy Walker enjoyed an 11-point third period but was blanked in the last quarter.

"WE JUST can't seem to hold a big lead," moaned coach Bill Sharman of the Lakers. "We are sporadic on defense, but our rebounding has been great in this streak and we've cut down on our turnovers."

Happy Hairston, as usual, was a pillar of strength on the backboards, grabbing 15. He has picked off 79 in the last four games, a sparkling 19.3 average, and also has hit 62 per cent from the field in averaging 20 points.

"Their forwards are too strong for us," admitted Kings' coach Phil Johnson, who has done a marvelous job (21-25 record) since taking over the team in early December.

Kansas City has played the last two months without Nate Archibald, the

Millikan regains its touch in time, stuns Fountain Valley

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

Teams that score only four points in one quarter away from home in the pressure cooker atmosphere of CIF competition just don't win games, right?

Not so. Millikan High overcame such an adversity Friday night and pulled away to a 55-45 first-round 4-A victory over Irvine League champion Fountain Valley after being held to two field goals in the third quarter.

A near capacity turnout of 2,600 at Fountain Valley watched the host Barons outscore Millikan 13-2 over the first 5:32 of the third period to assume their biggest lead of the night, 39-36.

The blitz came at a time when the Rams, according to coach Bill Odell, were trying to readjust their defense to put more pressure on high-scoring Fountain Valley forward Dan Malane.

kids were so conscious of trying to force Malane to the weak side, we gave up too many easy shots elsewhere."

Malane, an all-CIF third team selection as a Junior and who had scored 34 points in each of his last two Irvine League games to raise his season average to 19.4, penetrated the Rams for 14 of his team's 26 first-half points.

But despite the wobbly streak, the defensive move on Malane eventually paid off.

Malane got his only basket of the second half 30 seconds into the third quarter, then missed his last nine shots from the field. With Lodestein popping away from outside, then scoring Fountain Valley's only breakthrough basket of the game, the Barons took the lead for the first time at 38-36.

Steve Dorsett added one of two free throws at 2:38 but there was no more scoring in the quarter until the last 18 seconds when a basket by Ram Rich Davis cut the margin to 39-38.

The respite seemed to breathe renewed life into the Rams.

Dennis June put Millikan back ahead 40-39 at 6:53. Lodestein countered that basket, but then June at 5:10, Jeff Peters (4:53), Jeff McHugh (4:00) and a steal by Davis who fed McHugh for an easy basket at 2:50 enabled the Rams to run off eight points in a row and assume a 48-41 lead they never relinquished.

Fountain Valley got to within three points at 48-45 at 2:05, but there was no scoring again until free throws by June and Rod Dalton in the last 40 seconds and a three-point play at Dalton at 0:13 accounted for the final margin.

Take away the 2-for-16 third quarter showing and the Rams rarely missed.

June and Peters effectively shot over Fountain Valley's 1-2-2 zone defense when the Rams were 7-for-11, 7-for-10 and 6-for-8 from the field in the first, second and fourth quarters.

June led the balanced Millikan attack with 13 points. McHugh was in heavy traffic most of the time and held to 11, but managed 14 rebounds.

Wilkes sparks spurt

Combined News Services

OAKLAND — Keith Wilkes triggered a seven-minute, second-half spurt which saw third-ranked UCLA score 20 successive points en route to an easy 83-60 Pacific-8 Conference basketball victory over California Friday night.

UCLA, which led only 34-29 at halftime, used a balanced scoring attack to subdue California in front of 10,966 fans, the largest crowd ever to see a Bears' home basketball game. The contest was played in the Oakland Coliseum Arena.

The Bruins were led by Wilkes' 19 points, while Bill Walton added 17, Tommy Curtis 11 and Pete Trgovich 10.

Guard Brady Allen led all scorers with 24 points and kept Cal in the game during the first half of play.

WALTON TOOK away 22 rebounds as the Bruins outboarded Cal, 49-30. The big redhead, playing with a fresh haircut, also added eight assists.

"Bill is playing a little better," acknowledged Wooden. "By that I mean what I know he can do. He hasn't been playing up to par for him lately."

Wooden said the Bears "shot very, very well and took away from our defensive efforts the first half. We also failed to exploit their weaknesses. They earned the baskets they got."

The Bruins ran their conference record to 10-2 and their over-all record to 21-3, remaining tied for first place in the Pac-8 with crosstown rival USC. California is now 1-10 in league play, 9-16 over-all.

CALIFORNIA was in the thick of the game the entire first half, twice securing six-point leads and holding the advantage at one point for eight minutes.

The Bruins grabbed the lead for good at 29-28 with 3:32 to play in the half.

Newcombe in finals; Smith tops Metreveli

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

John Newcombe of Australia swept into the finals of the $50,000 Michelob Pro Celebrity Tennis Classic with an easy 6-3, 6-2, victory over Patricio Cornejo of Chile Friday afternoon at La Costa.

American star Stan Smith of Pasadena had a tougher time of disposing of Russia's Alex Metreveli in a quarter final match Friday night, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

To get a crack at Newcombe in Sunday afternoon's final, Smith will have to get past a young man who has upset him twice this year, Raul Ramirez of Mexico. Ramirez reached the semifinals Thursday night with a 7-6, 6-4, triumph over Dick Stockton of Dallas.

The Smith-Ramirez match will be played at about two this afternoon following pro-celebrity doubles which start at noon.

Neither today's nor Sunday's program is a sellout and tournament officials said Friday, "The gas shortage has been hurting us all week."

STANFORD — Is the pressure becoming unbearable for USC? Can the Trojans avoid a fateful mishap as the tension mounts toward their March 9 Pacific-8 Conference championship clash with UCLA?

"Give me these two games by one point apiece and I'll be a happy man," said Trojan coach Bob Boyd earlier this week, looking ahead to meetings on the road with Stanford and California.

The Trojans escaped Stanford by more than one point Friday night, but just barely, 62-59.

Outscoring the visitors, 17-8, Stanford stormed back into contention, 58-57, with only 55 seconds remaining.

The Trojans, who had surrendered a possible eight points in the closing two minutes on missed free throws in the bonus situation, got a pair from Westra — the poorest shooter from the line among the starters at 48 per cent.

Rich Kelley, the Cards' 7-foot center, made a layup attempt that rolled and bounced around the rim until Ed Schweitzer tipped it in. But the Stanford forward was called for offensive goal-tending.

WILLIAMS followed with his free throws and, despite two free throws by Kelley, the Cards never regained possession in the closing seconds.

49ERS LACK TIME —NOT INCENTIVE

By JIM MCCORMACK

It is basketball's version of only two shopping days left before Christmas.

"I would expect that the kids will come to do a job," Lute Olson says of Long Beach State's Long Beach Arena game with the University of Pacific tonight, "and I'm hoping that we will have a good crowd."

"There's not much time left for people to see some of these kids."

Only two chances, in fact. Tonight at 8 against the Tigers and Tuesday night, also in the Arena, against Fresno State.

These contests will conclude the most successful to date—and most frustrating season in Long Beach State's basketball history and also provide the conclusion to the standout careers of Leonard Gray, Glenn McDonald and Rick Aberegg.

Olson expects the 49ers to go out in the same style that has seen them win 22 of 24, including a perfect 10 in a row in the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn.

Wilson High's basketball team finished in third place in the Moore League this season and was awarded a CIF playoff berth on the basis of its 19-7 season record.

The Bruins performed like champions Friday night, though, running past an outclassed Bishop Amat squad, 73-56, before a crowd of 800 at Edgewood High in West Covina.

playoff test Tuesday night against Huntington Beach.

Wilson scored the first two baskets of the game against the Angelus League titlists Friday and gradually pulled away via an impressive display of teamwork.

Highly-touted 6-foot-7 center Tom Caserman, supplied his usual scoring punch, connecting on 11 of 14 floor shots to lead all scorers with 22 points; often-overlooked forward Bill Davis exploded for 13 points, hitting six of nine field goals, and also hauled down a game-high nine rebounds; backcourt whiz Dean Decker supplied the artistry of floor leadership, passing off for eight assists and virtually controlling the tempo of the contest.

Then, the likes of forward Larry Buckel (5 rebounds, 5 assists), guard Neal Arnold (14 points, 5-of-8 from the field) and reserve Joe Stinson (nine points on three field goals and three free throws) added to the Bruin machine that surely had no energy crisis.

Wilson led 17-14 five seconds into the second quarter and then scored the next seven points. An Amat comeback attempt was halted by a similar scoring spurt in the third period, when the Bruins increased a 40-32 advantage with 10 unanswered points — eight by Arnold.

For the losers, leading scorer Charles Jennings hit for 20 points, but sat out much of the second period and fouled out early in the fourth.

Fans at Long Beach City College's 117-95 win over the Metropolitan Conference All-Stars always knew where the ball was.

It was in the air. A total of 168 field goals attempts plus 83 tries from the foul line kept the game out in front of the spectators, and 68 fouls and 120 rebounds — evenly divided — swelled the statistics on the LBCC floor Friday night.

Super sub Bill Cantwell led all shooters with 24 points, and starters Dan Frost and Dave Hillman plus reserve Carter Reedus each had 15.

For the All-Stars, Valley's Mike Holman tallied 17 points and El Camino's Rusty Smith had 16.

LBCC coach Bill Fraser also got a good game out of Ev Ratlett, both on the frontline and the backcourt, and from guard

Dan Marques, effective in a quarterbacking role.

Even Dave Mais got into the act for six points, all in a row shortly after Reedus had put the Vikings over the 100-mark with a pair of free throws with five minutes to go.

Patty Johnson will toss aside her crutches today, hopeful of preventing the most one-sided defeat in the three-year history of the U.S.-Soviet Union indoor track and field meet.

"The men are going to need our help tomorrow," said Patty, Friday after testing an ankle that was sprained in warmups for the U.S. indoor championships last week. The hurdler from La Jolla is one of the few "world class" U.S. women athletes competing — or men either for that matter.

U.S. team officials have flatly predicted the Americans will be lucky to come within 15 points of a Russian team that boasts world champion decathlete star Nikolai Avilov, Olympic triple jump champion Viktor Sanyeyev plus world women's champion shotputter Nadzhezhda Chizhova and miler Lyudmila Bragina.

WILT Chamberlain wasn't really lost, he knew where he was all the time.

"I don't understand what all the fuss was about," said Wilt upon arrival in Uniondale, N.Y., to prepare his San Diego Conquistadors for their game with the New York Nets. "I had some personal business and was only gone a few days. Another man misses a few days of work and no body starts a nationwide investigation."

Wilt's absence for games in Virginia and North Carolina earlier in the week was explained as illness, a scouting mission for the ABA draft and personal business for Q's owner Dr. Leonard Bloom.

FOR The first time in the 53-year history of the IC4A track and field championships, a woman will be competing.

Ellen Minkow of Syracuse will break the sex barrier tonight, entering the mile walk, a non-scoring event, during the two-day meet at Princeton.

NBC will televise nationally the Midwest regional NCAA playoffs games between Marquette and the Mid-American Conference champion (probably Ohio U.) and Notre Dame's contest with the Ohio Valley Conference kingpin (probably Austin Peay).

Members of Oakland's World Series championship team received their rings Friday and the reactions ranged from disappointment to anger.

"They're trash rings," said American League MVP Reggie Jackson. Last year the A's received rings worth $1,500, featuring a full carat diamond set in a green stone. This year there is no diamond and owner Charlie Finley didn't bother to present them in person. He sent them to Mesa, Ariz., via parcel post.

COACH Lefty Driesell of Maryland gets ill every time he looks at the NCAA playoff pairings.

"We have three of the top five teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference and only one can go to the NCAA playoffs," he moaned. "I think you should pick the best teams to play for the national championship. I don't think every conference champion should get an automatic bid."

JOHN NEWCOMBE of Australia advanced to the final round of the $50,000 Pro-Celebrity Tennis Classic by downing surprising PATRICIO CONNOR of Chile, 6-3, 6-2. Montreal of the National Hockey League has placed the name of Russia's ANATOLY FIRSOV on its negotiation list. CALE YARBOROUGH, given a second chance to qualify after a NASCAR officials missed one of his first two laps, captured the pole position for Sunday's Carolina 460 stock car race with a speed of 134.888 mph.

None of the lawsuits hanging over the head of heavyweight boxing champion GEORGE FOREMAN — including a new one for $2.5 million — can affect his scheduled March 26 title fight with KEN NORTON, TV promoter HANK SCHWARTZ says. The new suit, filed by KO Inc., cites Foreman's trainer DICK SADDLER and his former manager LEROY JACKSON. It seeks damages for the alleged breaking of a contract which, the company claims, gave it exclusive ancillary rights to all Foreman fights between 1971 and 1975. The newly formed National Indian Activities Assn. (NIAA) will field an all-Indian team in the AAU basketball championships later this month as well as present national championships for American Indians in boxing and rodeo.

Vikings have twin bill against LACC today

The first contest is a regularly scheduled one with Los Angeles City College and the second is another try at a game rained out Thursday on the visitors' field.

In support will be a team with a few changes from what Hicks said would be his squad at the start of the season.

Steve Capie will be in leftfield, and Steve Fenoglio will switch to right.

Otherwise, the Vikings have Greg Commentz catching, Bill Simpson at short, John Crotty on third, and Don Zimmerman in centerfield.

Los Angeles City College beat Long Beach 4-0 in an earlier meeting this week to bring the LBCC record to 6-4.

RV industry can conserve energy

In this time of emergency, when energy conservation is mandatory, the huge Recreation Vehicle Industry and the more than 19 million Americans who use RV's, can, and are, contributing importantly.

Recent studies released by the Trailer Coach Association indicate that simply by using their recreation vehicles more and their residences less, RV owners can save up to 80% in energy consumption.

This is possible because use of utilities by RV's is far less than in the average residence. Furthermore, the extra car (in some cases two) is garage "bound" while the family is using its RV, thus representing a gasoline savings.

Moreover, RV owners are increasing their car-pool operations, contributing further to gas savings. A fully occupied RV, large motor homes comfortably seat 6 to 10 people or more, can "replace" the use of two or more smaller vehicles.

The morale factor is the most important of all. Is play necessary for man's healthy existence or is it an amenity, a luxury or reward for work?

Konrad Lorenz, author of "On Aggression," has referred to most forms of recreation, or play, as a substitute for aggression. The Kerner Report, issued by a special study group set up by the Federal Government several years ago, carried strong implications that without outdoor recreation and outlets for the populations of large cities, there would be large-scale eruptions of antisocial behavior. Recreation, even if limited, is the best "medicine."

Take one segment of America's population: The 19 million RV travelers should be guaranteed use of their vehicles. In Southern California alone more than 700,000 families own RV's, more than in any other section of the country.

Average use of an RV is less than 4,000 miles a year. Until now, only 1/10th of one percent of gasoline expended for passenger use in the U.S. actually went into the tanks of RV's. Reduced speed limits will enable RV's to obtain more miles per gallon.

Take another segment: The recreation vehicle industry, a 5 billion dollar giant representing 650 manufacturers in 750 plants, 350 RV supplier manufacturers, 23,500 dealers and more than 9,500 private RV campgrounds representing an investment of more than $700 million. Nationally, RV manufacturers employ more than 110,000 people with an annual payroll that exceeds $605 million.

Next to agriculture and manufacturing, recreational activity is California's biggest industry. Morale-wise, millions of California families need continued use of their RV's. In turn, they spend millions of dollars, fulfilling the livelihood of thousands of tourist oriented enterprises.

Lt. Governor Ed Reinecke has said that tourists should be allowed extra gasoline if the nation adopts fuel rationing because recreational travel is vital to California's tourist industry.

Reinecke, Chairman of the state's Energy Planning Council, said

Vehicle that gives you a lift

In April, 1969, Bill Bennett, manufacturer of Delta Wing Kites, then president of the Australian Kite Flyers' Club, left Sydney, Australia, on an around the world vacation, and since his business favorite sport and hobby was water ski kite flying he brought with him his Delta Wing Ski Kite.

He volunteered to give an exhibition at the National Water Ski Championships at Berkeley, being seen for the first time in the United States. Later he did a spectacular flight over and around the Statue of Liberty and landed on the lawn at the base.

It was obvious that the Delta Wing was a sensation in the U.S. so Bill decided to return to California to set a manufacturing plant for the Delta Wing.

He has flown at fairs, race tracks, opening of Ontario International Motor Speedway, conventions, drag strips, and given exhibitions introducing for the first time the Delta Wing Kite at Cypress Gardens, Marine World, Sea World, Wisconsin Dells and other show areas.

The height obtainable on the Delta Wing is limited only by the length of tow line and the flyer's nerve. Heights in excess of 9,000 feet have been obtained. It may be flown behind boats, cars, snowmobiles, beneath balloons and in still wind conditions by just running down a hill to get up sufficient flying speed and then flown away from the surface of the hill. In strong winds one or two steps is all that is necessary to become airborne and begin soaring or gliding.

Another fact for Bennett's Delta Wing Kites and Gliders has been in flying from the snow slopes. He introduced this at Home Wood Resort, Lake Tahoe, in 1969.

Bennett and his company have developed a "Back Pack" engine for use on their Delta Wing Kites and Gliders.

Constructed of polydacron, aircraft aluminum and stainless steel, the Delta Wing is made in sizes from 13-foot, 6-inches to a 25-foot model which can be power driven by a Wankel engine and propeller. They weigh from 30 to 45 pounds for the larger models.

Sensitive to control and highly maneuverable, they can be flown on water, snow and land without modification, where pin point landings can be made with little effort.

Take a tip from cross-country truck drivers

Take a tip from cross-country truck drivers. Their knowledge of power, pay load, size of vehicle and conditions on the highway can go a long way toward making it more pleasant — and safer — for you to drive a camper, trailer or motor home. Compared to an automobile, a motor home or travel trailer, with its added length, requires caution when changing lanes or passing another vehicle. Obviously, you have to allow yourself greater space in which to pass. Since you are pulling more weight, you are more ponderous than a passenger car and you should be traveling at a lower speed. Of course, you will quickly accustom yourself to the differences between your car and your recreational vehicle. In addition to the every day safety factors of driving, there are tips which can help you considerably, adding to your enjoyment and peace of mind. Much of this advice has been gathered from truck drivers with long records of safety on the highways. Always use the right-hand lane when climbing a hill. It is the law in some states that all oversize vehicles travel in the right-hand lane when climbing grades; many states build special heavy vehicle lanes on these grades. Use them.

When climbing a hill, you will often have to shift down to a lower gear with a resultant drop in speed. If you move into the slow lane, traffic can pass unimpeded; if you stick to the center lane, traffic may pile up until somebody gets mad enough to attempt to pass. On a hill, this can be disastrous.

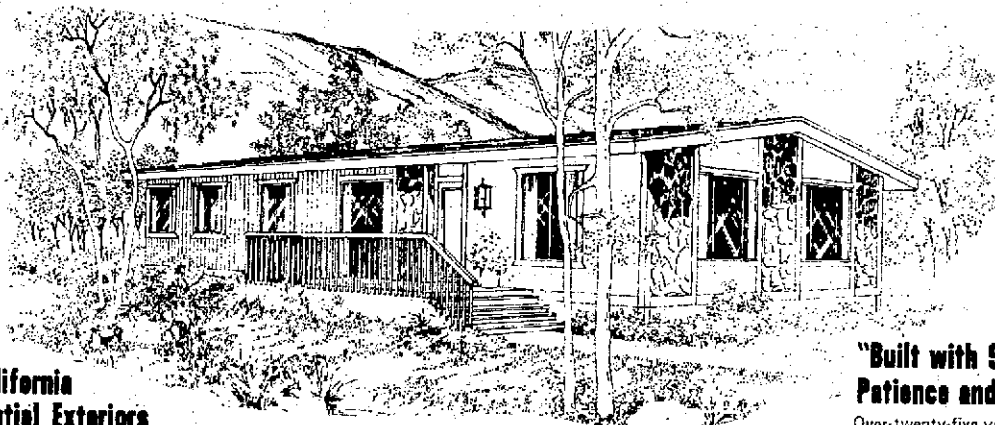

Going down a steep grade is a like situation. It's a good idea to watch the traffic behind you at all times. If you notice that traffic is beginning to build up, particularly on a winding road, pull over and let the others pass you by.

If you are traveling an unfamiliar road, particularly at night, you will find that the big truck drivers can help you immensely. Pick a truck — one of the cross-country movers, for instance — that is going in your direction and at your rate of speed. Drop in behind him, anywhere from a quarter to a half mile, and watch his lights.

With a little practice, you can match his every move, observing his reactions to the road and traffic.

Strict standards keep incidents of fire low

As more and more families across the U.S. turn to the mobile home lifestyle in answer to their economic and social needs, one question is often asked: How safe are mobile homes from the danger of fire?

Significant data comparing the ratio of mobile home fires to "fixed" single family dwellings is still sparse but governmental and independent standards agencies have uncovered some interesting comparisons.

"Mobile homes are not as prone to fires as other forms of single family housing," said George H. Tryon, National Fire Protection Association Executive.

Tryon cited information obtained from the Oregon State Fire Marshal's Office, one of the few sources of recorded history on mobile home fires.

"In 1971, an estimated 89,500 mobile homes and 660,000 standard dwellings, a ratio of one mobile home to about 7.4 dwellings, existed in Oregon," said Tryon.

"During the same year in Oregon, there were 198 fires reported in mobile homes and 4,316 fires in standard dwellings, a ratio of 1 mobile home fire to about 22 fires in standard dwellings."

Tryon pointed out to the New York state firemen that there is a valid modern and comprehensive construction standard for mobile homes identified as the American National Standards Institute A119.1 and the National Fire Protection Association's 501B.

Specific sections of the two standards apply directly to fire safety. Many of the requirements, including mandatory installation of smoke detectors is required in most western states, were pioneered by the mobile home industry and are not yet present in all model building codes.

Fire Safety specifications governing the construction of mobile homes built to these codes include: flame-spread classification on the interior finish of habitable rooms; an exit door to the outside, or a specifically sized exit window for each bedroom; smoke detector alarms in each sleeping area; and two exterior doors are also required for each mobile home.

"One of the standards' unique features is a requirement that most fuel burning appliances (furnaces and water heaters) must be fully vented to the outside for exhaust and combustion air," Tryon added.

Women driving more—

According to recently released federal government figures, more American women hold driver licenses than ever before—some 52 million of the 118 million licensed drivers in the nation.

In 1940, some 24.3 percent of all licenses were held by women. By 1952, women drivers had increased to 28 percent of the total, and by 1972 the percentage of licenses held by women had jumped to 44 percent.

Women drive fewer miles per year than men, however. In fact, in every age group, men drive about twice as many miles annually as women.

Recreationists need key to outdoors

A drive to create new vacationing opportunities for the nation's 20 million recreation vehicle users by having the federal government open more terrain near metropolitan areas features a new "save energy" program strongly supported by the Trailer Coach Association.

Norman Jacobson, Chairman of TCA's Recreation Vehicle Division Board of Governors, said the program is being pushed by the industry through the newly published Nationwide Outdoor Recreation Plan.

"The nationwide plan is designed to help Congress and federal agencies as well as state, local and the private sectors in formulating policies and action programs that are responsive to the needs of recreationists," said Jacobson, a member of the bureau's advisory board.

TCA and other recreation officials met with Department of Interior officials in Washington to review the recreation industry's situation in light of the energy crisis and determine how it will effect future outdoor recreation needs.

Geral Gross, Vice President of Sportcoach Corporation and a member of TCA's RV Board of Governors, outlined the recreation vehicle industry's program to conserve energy by adapting to the current energy crisis.

"We're an industry with a constituency of almost 20 million RV owners and users dependent upon energy conservation, the environment and the preservation of family recreation," Gross said.

"One of the industry's tools for tackling the energy problem will be the mobilization of the millions of recreation minded RV owners and users and other camping enthusiasts.

Speaking on behalf of all recreation industries, Gross urged the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation officials to employ their many resources to work with industry on behalf of all recreation minded Americans.

"One important example is opening up Federal lands for suitable recreation purposes in and near metropolitan areas."

Representing TCA on the Plan Advisory Board and present at the meeting were Norman Jacobson, Contempo Campers; Eldon Smith, Fleetwood Enterprises and Gerald Gross. Other TCA representatives present included Gene Stout, Coachmen Industries and Richard Moss, Director of Washington Affairs for TCA.

Trailers offer good mileage

A spokesman for one of the nation's largest manufacturers of fold-down camping trailers does not expect the current gasoline shortage publicity to have much effect on the popular recreation vehicle this summer and fall.

"The consumers' present awareness of gasoline is the highest since World War II, but we do not anticipate that it will have any more effect on camping trailers than on automobiles themselves," says Neil R. Dodge, Sales Manager of Vesely Company, Lapeer, Michigan, producer of the Apache camper.

"We are not surprised at reports of increased interest in camping trailers. Many families are considering gasoline and the size of their next automobile when shopping for a trailer," Dodge said. He points out that because of the lightweight and low wind resistance, the camping trailer has very little effect on gasoline mileage (at most one or two miles less per gallon), and they can be pulled by smaller vehicles.

"The camper has a lot of advantages in addition to its ease of hauling," Dodge says. "Among them is the ability to expand with enough space to sleep up to eight people."

Wesley has developed a new solid state Apache camper that Dodge says offers more security and convenience than possible before. The new solid state camper utilizes strong, lightweight thermoplastic rather than the usual canvas or vinyl tent.

"You can do more things with the solid state camper," Dodge said. "We have a lockable door and windows with solid frames. It all adds up to more security and all-weather performance."

Another factor in development of the solid state model is that more older people are taking to the highways and need more convenience. The camper is easy to work with. It can be cranked up or down with little effort, or a power motor is now available to assist with the setup of the trailer.

"The camping trailer is a family-type unit because you can handle more people for less money, and you don't have much bulk to pull behind your car," Dodge said. He added that "there are more camps and better highways to encourage campers today, and camping trailers can go more places than other types of trailers."

FIFTH-WHEEL trailer by Pioneer is one of newest innovations in trailer camping . . . more freedom of movement for automobile is one asset — the other is gasoline mileage.

Q & A: recreational vehicles

The energy crisis and gasoline shortage are top news and cocktail topics. Everyone is concerned. Everyone talks about trying to conserve. But as you wait for the signal to change at Seventh Street and Pacific Coast Highway, as you cruise down the San Diego Freeway on Saturday afternoon, do you notice fewer cars on the road? No.

Southern Californians are on the move. They're out to make the most of their leisure time, and many of them choose to spend their time off as far away from the smog and congestion of city living as their vehicles will take them

And more and more people are finding that recreation vehicles—be they small, (Volkswagen campers) or huge, (luxurious motorhomes), make those brief flights from city life more fun and economical.

For those who look enviously upon these self-contained homes away from home, but have not yet dared take the purchase plunge, the Trailer Coach Association has compiled a list of most-frequently asked questions, with answers to help you make up your mind about the recreation vehicle of your choice.

Q What is a recreation vehicle as defined by the Trailer Coach Association?

A We divide RVs into five groups. The first are the camping trailers. These must be towed by another vehicle. They come with a collapsible tent and can sleep up to six people.

The forerunner of all recreation vehicles is the popular travel trailer.

Truck campers can be divided into two-types—slide-in and chassis-mounts. Chassis-mount campers are mounted to the bare frame of a chassis cab truck.

The last category is comprised of the real luxury units in the field—the motor homes.

Q What should a prospective purchaser of a recreation vehicle look for?

A A vehicle that will fulfill his family's camping and recreation needs. A vehicle that is priced within his budget. Seek out reliable dealers and established RV manufacturers. Make certain the RV bears a state insignia of approval signifying compliance to Code requirements. Many consumer and trade publications run tests of RV's and compare various makes of vehicles against each other.

Q What is the Trailer Coach Association's Recreation Vehicle Consumer Affairs Council?

A This is a body composed of RV manufacturers, dealers, suppliers, banking interests and the public empowered to handle consumer complaints. RV consumer groups are also included in the council's deliberations.

Q How does the Consumer Affairs Council operate?

A A written grievance is received from the RV owner. If more information is needed a questionnaire is sent to him. The manufacturer or dealer involved in the complaint is contacted. If the consumer still receives no satisfaction the case is turned over to the council's action committee. This committee is comprised of several manufacturers and dealers who are respected by their industry peers.

A Address your letters to the RV Consumer Affairs Council, 3855 E. La Palma Ave., Anaheim, Calif. 92806.

Extra energy saving

California residents purchasing mobile homes in 1974 will receive a bonus in the form of extra safety and energy conservation features according to Frank E. Greenleaf, National Director of Standards for the Trailer Coach Association.

"Effective January 1st, mobile homes sold in California must meet increased insulation and heat-loss requirements," said Greenleaf.

"California's mobile home code is consistent with the revised National Fire Protection Association's insulation and heat loss code which will soon go into effect for all forms of housing."

These requirements will represent a tremendous energy savings as more than 1 million people, or roughly 5 per cent of California's population, live in mobile homes.

RV standards let consumer play safe

Standards are for people.

Today we have standards that relate to sizes, shapes, performance, colors, etc. Thousands of products—including recreation vehicles—are now made to "standards."

The Trailer Coach Association, representing most of the Recreation Vehicle suppliers, manufacturers and dealers throughout the entire northwestern hemisphere, has been working for over ten years to establish a set of uniform standards for the industry.

One of the nation's respected standards agencies, the American National Standards Institute, developed and approved the "Standard for Recreation Vehicles, ANSI A119.2."

Recreation Vehicles are defined as vehicular type units, primarily designed as temporary living quarters for recreation, camping, or travel use which either have their own motive power or are mounted on or drawn by another vehicle. The basic types of recreation vehicles are travel trailers, campers, trailers, truck campers and motor homes.

ANSI Recreation Vehicle Standard A119.2 breaks RV's into three main categories. Plumbing systems, heating systems and electrical systems covers virtually everything built into an RV. Not included in the RV ANSI Standard are regulations governing the construction of recreation vehicles. Scheduled for inclusion in the next RV Standard revision will be requirements for emergency exits and flammability regulations covering interior finishes. Features related to the safety and performance of the vehicles when in use as a vehicle fall under Federal and State motor vehicle regulations.

The current edition of the ANSI RV Standard receives the same popularity among RV manufacturers as the ANSI mobile home standard shares with mobile home manufacturers. Thirty-two states have thus far adopted the standards as criteria for State code programs.

In conformance with the policies of the American National Standards Institute, and the four sponsors of the project (of which TCA is one), a committee on Recreation Vehicles has been given the continuing responsibility to maintain and improve this Standard.

HALL E LU JAH!

NO MORE LONG LINES — NO MORE PANIC BUYING
NO MORE STAY-HOME WEEKENDS — NO MORE GAS CANS FILL UP ON AN ODD OR EVEN DAY AND GO CAMPING NOW!!

Yes, the panic is over.

If you've put your recreational vehicle plans aside until you had a definite program on gas, you've got one now. SEE US TODAY AT ONE OF OUR GIANT RV CENTERS!

GRAND OPENING!

14-Acre Inventory

Over 14 acres of new and used trailers, campers, motorhomes, 5th wheels, trucks, mini homes, bubble tops, campers, chassis mounts. IT'S A RECREATIONAL WONDERLAND!

ODD-EVEN SYSTEM GREAT FOR RV BUFFS

Recreational vehicles have up to a 120-gallon capacity with dual tanks. Your cruising radius far exceeds your needs. Fill up early in the week — no hassle with panic buyer lines. The family is ready for a fabulous weekend at the ocean, the mountains, the desert, etc. Most RV weekends are taken on between ten and twenty gallons of gas. Turn off your house, your cars, and save energy every weekend with an RV camping trip.

Your Gas Problems Are Over! Our Prices Make Us Sick!

The RV selling boom is here again! Sales have increased by over 200% in the past 60 days. We should be getting top dollar for our rigs, but we aren't. We are still drastically overstocked from the November-December energy crunch. (We even had to lease a storage lot). You'll see DISCOUNTS AND TRADE-IN ALLOWANCES THAT WOULD MAKE ANY DEALER SICK (or make any customer well).

Industry is conserving energy

it is unrealistic to view recreational travel as a nonessential, and that such travel somehow must be protected.

"Tourism is a massive portion of our state's economy. It's on the order of $4 billion to $4.5 billion a year, and I think we have to protect that industry just like you have to protect any industry."

"Tourism is very close to a million jobs in California, and so when you say it's an optional industry, you're saying a million people are, optional, and that won't fly," Reinecke said.

Reinecke said he opposes gasoline rationing unless voluntary measures fail. He said if rationing is imposed, there should be allowances for vacation travel in the priority system.

"We're not trying to protect the tourist. We're trying to protect the industry," Reinecke said. "But in protecting the industry, we have to protect the tourist."

Concerns that recreation may not be given a proper recognition and priority if there is rationing of oil, gasoline and other energy sources is reflected beyond any regional level.

On the national level, James Watts, Director of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, is a staunch supporter of a high priority for the national's recreational needs. He points out that the economy of many states is dependent on visitors, or tourist dollars.

Watts said, "The recreation and travel industries support millions of jobs throughout the nation. But, beyond the economic effects are the social implications. We have become an urban nation with little open space in our cities. Most people work in order to have the means to play. Restricting people to the urban environment without the means to reach recreational outlets outside the cities could lead to deterioration of both the people and the cities."

The Department of the Interior's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation is making an effort to see that a reasonable consideration is given to all aspects of recreation in any energy allocations by the Federal Government. Shortages of fuel and materials could affect every phase of recreation unless the need for play outlets is recognized and given its proper priority.

Gerald Gross, Vice President of Sportcoach Corporation and a member of Trailer Coach Association's RV Board of Governors, recently outlined the recreation vehicle industry's program to conserve energy.

"One of the industry's tools for tackling the energy problem will be the mobilization of the millions of recreation minded RV owners and users and other camping enthusiasts.

The RV and related industries provide a vital link in the nation's economic and social systems. Strain it—and we're all in trouble.

Preserve it, by collectively saving energy, such as driving a fully-occupied RV within the new state speed limits and staying closer to home, and the energy crisis can be licked.

New campgrounds being built to meet the demand

New campgrounds are springing up at an accelerated pace across the country as more investors take cognizance of the recreation vehicle boom.

"Booming camping and recreation vehicle resort statistics have caught the eye of large investors who are building campgrounds at an accelerated rate," said Norman Jacobson, Chairman of the Trailer Coach Association's Recreation Vehicle Board of Governors and Vice-President of Contempo Campers Inc.

There are three types of campgrounds—federal, state and privately owned. Many are filled during the summer and holiday weeks, because of the growing ranks of RV owners.

There are at least 14 major campground chains throughout the country offering hundreds of scenic campground settings. Some of the most popular in the West are Kampgrounds of America (KOA), Crazy Horse Outside Inns, Jellystone Campgrounds, LTD and Venture Out In America. Reservations to most campgrounds can be made by a telephone call and a mailed deposit.

California offers a unique service. The State Department of Parks and Recreation and several national forests offer reservations through Ticketron's On-Line time sharing computer. There are 160 outlets where the camper can go and pay $1.50 charge as a non-refundable deposit for choice sites.

Reservations can also be made as much as 90 days in advance by writing to the Resources Agency, Box 2390, Department of Parks and Recreation, Sacramento, Calif.

'Warm feet, warm heart'

Cold feet can quickly take the enjoyment out of any winter outing, reminds Hot Foot Harry, an insulation engineer at Winnebago Industries, Inc., manufacturers of motor homes, pickup campers and travel trailers.

If proper floor insulation has not been incorporated into your recreational vehicle, Harry offers the following suggestions to help prevent cold toes on a frigid morning.

Wall-to-wall carpeting laid over insulated padding makes an effective combination to overcome that stone cold feeling brought on when a unit only has a layer of vinyl placed over plywood flooring. Carpet dealers often have "remnant specials" that can be cut to fit a coach interior. Shaggy throw rugs can help combat the cold foot blues. Use a pad, or even layers of newspapers, under the rug for added insulation.

More serious minded winter sports fans may wish to install permanent insulation beneath their unit's floor by fitting a layer of Styrofoam on the underside. The job takes a bit of effort, but the installation can pay off on a long time basis.

Warm air can be a soothing balm to cold feet. A floor ducted furnace makes an effective cold chaser. Even a catalytic heater can help a heap. Warm air rising from the galley stove, oven or even an LP burning lamp chases cold air from the ceiling, but it seldom reaches the floor. You can reverse this air flow by installing a 12-volt battery operated fan to direct the air downward.

"And when trying to combat chilblains, don't forget the bliss of insulated stocks," Harry adds.

Vehicles total 117 million

The number of registered motor vehicles in the United States at the end of 1972 topped the 117 million mark, an increase of 4.1 per cent over 1971.

Passenger cars number 96,397,000 out of a total of 117,606,000 registrations, according to a Federal Highway Administration report. Truck and bus registrations are estimated at 21,209,000 — up 5 per cent over last year.

Tips for storing RV during winter

While winter-time offers lots of attractions to recreation vehicle owners, many enthusiasts prefer to put their units away for a well-earned seasonal rest. When storing recreation vehicles during next year's winter months, the following procedures should be observed.

Winter precautions recommended by the Recreational Vehicle Institute (RVI) include draining all water from the vehicle's water supply tanks and from sink and shower traps. Use compressed air, if available, to blow the last vestiges of moisture from all pipes and adding about a cupful of anti-freeze to each sink and shower drain to prevent freezing of any moisture remaining in the traps. Ask your RV dealer to recommend the correct anti-freeze product.

Units equipped with handpumps should have these pumps removed for winter storage where they will not freeze up. Sewage holding tanks must be properly emptied and drained, and anti-freeze added, even if the unit is to receive continued cold-weather use.

But protecting your RV against freeze-up is only part of your winter storage program. RVI recommends the following additional steps:

1. Jack up trailer or motor home, if it is not going to see winter use, and put it on good, sturdy wooden blocks.

2. Remove all batteries and store in a warm place. Charge should be applied to stored batteries at least twice during the winter months to prevent formation of sulphuric acid crystals on the lead plates and consequent shorting. Tops of batteries should be thoroughly clean and dry before storing.

3. Windows and vents should be tightly closed; however, crack one window open on the sheltered side of your RV to allow some air to enter.

4. Block up refrigerator, water heater, and heater vents, and all outside drains.

5. Cover all upholstery with old sheets or newspapers to prevent fading. Remove and store curtains and drapes. Some manufactured fabrics tend to dry out or crack under very cold conditions — it is wise to remove seats and cushions covered with such materials.

6. Thoroughly clean the entire vehicle and apply a coat of good, protective wax. Apply grease to all exposed chrome trim, including the backs of rear-view mirrors, hubcaps, radio antenna, etc.

7. Motorized RVs should be protected with anti-freeze in radiator and with thinner winter oil in the engine. During the winter, start and run engine once a week or oftener, and remove battery after each such test. 8. Remove snow accumulations from the exterior of the unit as often as possible. 9. Remove all canned and bottled foods and drinks from inside your RV.

Mobile home standards require safety first

Standards are for people.

The Trailer Coach Association, representing most of the Mobile Home suppliers, manufacturers and dealers throughout the entire northwestern hemisphere, has been working for over ten years to establish a set of uniform standards for the industry.

One of the nation's respected standards agencies, the American National Standards Institute, developed and approved the Standard for Mobile Homes, ANSI A119.1.

The Mobile Home ANSI Standard was six years in the making (1963 to 1969). It was established by experts in all areas that relate to home construction — including plumbing, gas, electricity, fire, sanitation, public health, insurance, construction and others.

Now that the Mobile Home Standard has been established, it is adhered to by more than 95% of the manufacturers of mobile homes across the U.S.

TCA is a strong backer of state enforced mobile home codes and as a co-sponsor of the ANSI Standard has actively worked for state adoption and enforcement of the ANSI code. Of the eleven western states covering "TCA territory", only two, Wyoming and Hawaii, have failed to adopt the standard.

The ANSI requirement serves two purposes. First, it establishes the minimum acceptable criteria which all manufacturers must build to. Secondly, it provides the home buyer with a means of determining whether his home is quality built and will provide an atmosphere of health and safety for his family.

The Standard for mobile homes covers four basic parts. They are:

1. Construction of the body and frame
2. Plumbing system
3. Heating System
4. Electrical System

The running gear that the mobile home is moved on — its wheels and axles — as well as the floor, side-walls and roof of the ANSI A119.1 home must all be designed and built to insure a long, safe and useful home.

Grievances ironed out for owners of mobile homes

Trailer Coach Association members and staff aren't in the laundry business—but lately they have been spending a lot of time ironing out mobile home consumer grievances.

The mobile home industry is a multi-billion dollar one, and with that much laundry on the line, TCA, representing mobile home and recreation vehicle dealers, manufacturers and suppliers throughout the eleven western states and Canada, wants a sparkling clean wash.

In May, 1972, TCA organized the Mobile Home Consumer Affairs Council. Under the leadership of Council Chairman Jerry Golden, past TCA President and Chairman of the Board for Golden West Mobile Homes, and aided by hard-working staff coordinators Francis E. Greenleaf and Edward L. Colleton, the council has made giant strides in ironing out mobile home purchaser's grievances.

"We have been handling consumer grievances since 1964," said Greenleaf, "but this is our first concentrated effort to speedily resolve the grievances that exist."

California mobile home sales have skyrocketed over the past eight years and the trend is expected to continue accelerating, according to the United California Bank.

The report shows that mobile home sales in California totaled 12,000 units in 1965. Last year sales topped 32,000 and annual sales should reach 75,000 homes by 1980.

"The rapid increase in mobile home parks in California has been a response to the strong demand for space accommodation for the mobiles," the report says.

"About 700,000 people live in nearly 300,000 mobile homes located in the state's 5,700 mobile home parks. An additional 300,000 people live in mobile homes located outside of parks on privately-owned properties and on public lands throughout the state. In total, approximately 1 million people, or roughly 5% of the state's population, now live in mobile homes."

The report points out differences between California mobile dwellers and those in other states. Most of California's mobile home owners are over 55 years of age, compared to the under-35 age group which comprises the national market.

Another variance from the national norm exists in mobile home retail price averages. The average retail price of a mobile home in California is now estimated at over $17,000, while for the U.S., the average price is about $7,700, the report states.

The report continues: "In view of the tremendous expenditures for mobile homes in California, owners obviously do not think in terms of economical shelter when choosing this life style; nationally, the mobile home generally serves as an alternative for families who are priced out of the market for conventional housing."

One-half of all mobile homes shipped to dealers in California are double-wides and about 48% are 12 foot wide, "representing the most expensive 'product mix' in the U.S. due to the high volume of large units," the report concludes.

Vehicle travel continues upward

Motor vehicles traveled an estimated 1,250 billion miles in the United States during 1972, a five per cent increase over 1971, reports the Federal Highway Administration.

Passenger cars accounted for 79 percent of the total travel, trucks 19 per cent, with buses and motorcycles making up the balance.

The largest share of travel—51 percent—was logged on urban streets and arterials.

According to the latest available figures,

RV Council ready to help

Recreation vehicle owners in the western states having trouble with their units still in warranty can receive industry help from the Trailer Coach Association's Recreation Vehicle Consumer Affairs Council.

"Since June, 1972, the industry council has received 122 RV grievances," said council chairman Chuck Starks, Dealer Manager for Overland Industries Inc.

"So far 96 of these grievances have been resolved to the consumers complete satisfaction."

The 14-man council is comprised of recreation vehicle dealers, manufacturers, suppliers and financial institution representatives throughout the eleven western states. It is assisted by TCA Recreation Vehicle Director Frank Shilling and RV Standards and Legislative Director Lee Moses.

Consumer grievances are acknowledged the day they are received and if more information is needed a questionnaire is sent to the consumer.

The council then notifies the dealer, manufacturer or supplier involved.

If no action is taken, the council's Action Committees, represented by TCA chapter members on a regional and local level, step in and attempt to secure a settlement.

Starks said that of the consumer grievances received, the overwhelming majority represent a breakdown in communication.

RV consumers with grievances should write to the Recreation Vehicle Consumer Affairs Council, P.O. Box 3163, Anaheim, California.

Largest group of drivers under 25

Drivers under the age of 25 comprise the largest group of licensed motorists in the United States, the Federal Highway Administration estimates.

Of the more than 118 million licensed drivers, 22.3 percent have not yet reached their 25th birthday. The second largest group — between the ages of 25 and 34 — represents 21.1 percent of the total, followed by the 35-44 age bracket with 17.5 percent.

Drivers in the 45-54 age range amounts to 17 percent, with those in the 55-64 category comprising 12.8 percent of the total. Motorists over 65 make up the smallest group with 9.3 percent.

The record number of 118,194,000 licensed drivers is greater than the total U.S. population in 1926 which was 117,399,000.

Q&A: mobile homes

For people who yearn for a home of their own but who can't afford or don't want the upkeep of a large house and surrounding property, a mobile home may be the perfect solution. Purchase prices are reasonable and space rental rates moderate.

Many mobile home parks are located near the ocean or nestled in quiet suburban areas, forming their own friendly little communities.

If you are considering the purchase of a mobile home, perhaps the following questions and answers compiled by the Trailer Coach Association will be helpful.

Q What should a prospective purchaser of a mobile home look for?

A A mobile home whose floor plan suits his needs for space and aesthetic appearance. A mobile home priced within his financial budget. Seek out reliable dealers and established mobile home manufacturers. Ask mobile home owners who they recommend. Be sure to obtain your mobile home park site in advance. Make certain the mobile home bears a California insignia of approval signifying compliance to Code requirements.

Q How much rent will someone who moves into a mobile home park have to pay?

A Monthly rental rates range from $30 to $90; the national average for a modern development ranging between $50 and $60 per month. Parks with extra facilities such as pools, playgrounds and community houses probably charge above average rental rates. Instead of renting, some parks sell mobile home lots on the condominium principle to provide for maintenance of the community facilities.

Q Is there much maintenance involved with mobile home ownership?

A Very little. The prefabricated metal exterior of most mobile homes is virtually maintenance-free. You can wash it down with a hose like the family car. The use of easy care plywoods and vinyl accent panels create distinctive effects on interior walls and ceilings.

Q What furnishings are included in the basic price of a mobile home?

A New mobile homes are sold fully equipped—refrigerator, range, water heater, furnace, draperies, lamps and floor coverings are all included in the purchase price. Optional features include air conditioning, dish washers, garbage disposals, washers, dryers, built-in vacuuming systems.

Q Are most of the people living in mobile home parks today older, retired people?

A No. Only 23 percent are retired or senior citizens. Fifty percent of all mobile home owners are young married under 35 years of age. The traditional aspect of home ownership as opposed to rent supplies a feeling of security and permanence and gives them an equity for their future housing needs.

U.S. leads world in vehicle use

More than 46 percent of all the cars, and some 36 percent of the trucks, in the world travel on America's streets and highways. This high use equates closely with national prosperity, according to the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association.

The MVMA notes that, when population-to-vehicle ratios around the world are compared, the trend is for the more prosperous nations to have the lowest number of people per vehicle.

7-STAR ENERGY CRISIS MOBILE HOME SALE!

For years, mobile homes have been America's best housing buy. Now . . . During our energy crisis, they're even better buys! They use less electricity & gas . . . Require less maintenance . . . Protect you from crime that's bound to increase during brown-outs . . . And . . . In the right park . . . They appreciate in value as conventional homes!

Now, Sunrise County — California's No. 1 Dealer (the largest and finest) — today and this week offers you the most realistic, money-saving sale we've ever held!

1 ★ DISCOUNT UP TO $2,000 ON NEW LOT SHOW MODELS!

Here's a March Clearance on beautiful, new 1973-74 lot show models to rival any clearance ever held! You'll save up to $2,000 cash if one of our lovely models fills your needs!

2 ★ A NEW 24x52 2-BEDROOM, 2-BATH & DEN HOME FOR ONLY $10,495!*

And that low price INCLUDES carpets, draperies, all appliances, other extras, delivery, and Sunrise County's exclusive 2-Year Written Service Guarantee!

3 ★ FREE! YOUR CHOICE OF $600 WORTH OF SHOW MODEL FURNITURE WITH PURCHASE OF ANY NEW LOT MODEL! . .

Plus you'll save up to $2000 on brand new 1973 lot demonstrators at every Sunrise County dealership! And whether you buy a lot demonstrator or not, you'll often pay less than wholesale for fine furniture at Sunrise County's new discount furniture store in Stanton!

4 ★ 1973 PRICES ON 1974 NEW, BRAND-NAME HOMES!

5 ★ EXCLUSIVE, WRITTEN 2-YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE

It's in writing and we mean it! Two full years of the finest service in California AFTER you buy your home! That's another reason why Sunrise has become No. 1 in California!

6 ★ SAVE ON IN-PARK RESALES!

Some are barely lived in, others are still lovely homes . . . all set up in most-wanted Los Angeles, Orange and Riverside County Family and Adult parks, complete with awnings, skirting, porches and even landscaping! Bargains galore . . . and you can move right in!

7 ★ HUGE SAVINGS ON CUSTOM SHOW MODEL FURNITURE!

Brand name and virtually brand new . . . directly from our custom show models at PRICES THAT ARE OFTEN LOWER THAN WHOLESALE! OUR FURNITURE DISCOUNT STORE AT 12121 BEACH BLVD. IS NOW OPEN — SUNDAY AND EVERY DAY! WHY PAY RETAIL OR EVEN WHOLESALE! IT'S BETTER THAN AN AUCTION! Call (714) 894-1384! Open nights & Sundays!
